Making Things Hum

The door of Mr. William Deacon's grocery store crashed behind Joe Paxton; and Joe, with an angry flush on his youthful face, strode down the only street that Ingleside possesses, his head very high in the air.

He had been sacked.

Sacked! And for what? For nothing at all!

Deacon had a grudge against him, urged Joe Paxton. Ever since Mr. Deacon had found out that Joe wanted to marry his daughter Dolly he had had his knife in him. That was all the thanks he got for staying from morning to night in a wretched little country store! Old Deacon would find out what was what. He, Joe Paxton, would show him!

At the foot of the street Joe met Dolly herself. Dolly was nineteen, and Joe was twenty-four; but Dolly had the advantage of him in looks. She was an uncommonly pretty girl. Joe's flush deepened as he saw her.

"Hallo, Joe!" cried Dolly. "Where are you off to?"

"Home."

"You're terribly early, aren't you?"

Joe swallowed something.

"I've got the sack," he said shortly. "Your father's in a rare mood this morning. I reckon he got up on the wrong side of the bed."

"But surely, Joe—What ever did you do to get the sack?" asked Dolly.

"Nothing. Nothing at all. But your father's been looking out for this chance. Well, I hope he'll better himself; and I can't do much worse. I'm off home!"

"But, Joe—"

"Yes!"

"You are not angry with me, are you? I can't help what father does. He's the same with me sometimes."

"Your father is—" Joe checked the vivid description that rose to his lips. "But I'm not angry with you, Dolly. I'll get another job quick. You see? And we'll get married, in spite of your father. I'll be at the two big trees to-night, Dolly."

"Well, Joe, maybe I'll be passing that way myself," she replied demurely. And they parted.

Farther down the street Joe ran across Charlie Dodd, whose father was the local auctioneer and estate agent.

"I suppose your father couldn't find me a job?" ventured Joe, when he had told him tale of woe.

"Not him. We're terrible slack just now. A man was in the office to-day. He's the first for weeks."

"What was he wanting?"

"Just asking if the sweetshop near the railway halt was to let. I told him I didn't know. He's to be back on Friday."

"I'll go to London!" said Joe decisively, after a pause. "That's the place to get on in. Ingleside is no use at all."

"Father says it's going to be developed. When they build a station instead of a halt—"

Joe interrupted, with a snort of disgust.

"They've been going to develop this place ever since I've been born," he said. "And I'll believe in that railway station when I see it. So long, Charlie!"

On his way home Joe had occasion to call at the halt to collect a parcel. On the rude platform two men were waiting for the train. He could not help overhearing what the man whose back was towards him was saying. It is true he did not try very hard.

"At present this is the most one-eyed place I've ever struck!" the man was saying. "Dodd was out, I must come back on Friday. The village idiot who represented Dodd couldn't tell me if the shop is to let or not. But I don't anticipate any difficulty in getting it. It's the finest site in the place; and we want to get in here, right on the ground floor, so to speak. I'm certain the place will boom. With a good service of trains—and the company has promised us that—Ingleside will boom like Old Harry!"

Just then the speaker turned, and his glance fell upon Joe Paxton.

"There's a train due, isn't there?" he cried.

"Yes, sir," replied Joe; and he made off with his parcel.

Joe was no dull-witted country lad. He realized that he was on the track of a big discovery. For the man whom he had overheard he recognized as Mr. Trueman, the manager of Shingleton's Stores.

For a glorious month he had worked at Shingleton's head establishment in London, and had left, so he thought, to better himself.

All the way home he thought over what he had heard.

Shingleton's Stores are everywhere; and it was very clear to Joe Paxton that Shingleton's contemplated making a descent upon Ingleside. More than that, they coveted the sweetshop beside the halt.

Mrs. Baker and he were on friendly terms. To her he made a proposal that fairly took her breath away.

It was quite late before he reached his home, where he lived with his mother.

"What's this I'm hearing?" she cried sharply. "Is it the case that you've got your leave?"

"Quite right!" replied Joe cheerfully.

"You should think shame of yourself!" said his mother. "What will you get to do now?"

"I've arranged that," said Joe quietly. "Me and Mrs. Baker are going into partnership."

"Into what?"

"Into partnership."

"You in a sweet-shop! I'm telling you, Joe—"

"You leave me alone, mother," interrupted Joe, so seriously that Mrs. Paxton was impressed, in spite of herself. "You leave me alone! I know what I'm about."

Joe entered upon his new duties early next morning. He had seen Dolly Deacon the night before, and even she had been inclined to belittle his new enterprise. She also had to be shown what was what. With his coat off, he set to work on Mrs. Baker's shop. He scrubbed it clean, he polished the window-pane, he rearranged the goods. But even then the place was not to his taste.

At the end of the week he was brooding over his lack of enterprise in the shop, and the even greater lack of customers, when Mr. Dodd called.

"Mrs. Baker in?" he asked.

"Not to-day. Do you want to buy some chocolates? We've got some fine fresh ones to-day."

Mr. Dodd frowned. This levity displeased him.

"I've got an inquiry about these premises—" he began.

"Well, I'm in partnership with Mrs. Baker now," said Joe. "What is the inquiry?"

Mr. Dodd hesitated. Then he said:

"I can make you a good offer for this shop."

"How much?"

"Twenty pounds a year."

"For the shop alone?"

"For the entire premises."

Joe laughed.

"Not much!" he said.

"Do you mean it's not enough?" cried Mr. Dodd, aghast.

"We're not on the market," said Joe. "If you had said a hundred a year—"

"My limit is thirty pounds."

"We've a lease of seventeen years," warned Joe.

"I can't help that. That's the limit!"

Joe hesitated. Then:

"Nothing doing!" he said.

And Mr. Dodd took his departure.

Joe waited a week, then two weeks, for Shingleton's to make another overture. He began to regret not having clinched with Mr. Dodd's offer. After a three weeks' silence he faced as bravely as possible his position, which was that of a partner in a very unremunerative confectionery business. It was now that Joe's aptitude for commerce came to his rescue.

He laylaid the travellers who journeyed to Ingleside in order to call on Mr. Deacon, and to them he explained his plan.

In a marvellously short time it began to be apparent that Mrs. Baker's shop had undergone a change, and that in Ingleside there was now a rival to Deacon's grocery establishment. Then Joe put on his best clothes and called on everybody who lived within a radius of six miles, and courted their patronage.

Things began to hum at Mrs. Baker's. Shortage of capital was their greatest worry, and the people in the big houses near Ingleside were not very prompt payers. Before the winter was out, Paxton realized that he had quite a good business and not enough money to keep it going. With several threatening letters before him Joe sat down one day to think a way out. He was puzzling thus when the shop bell rang and there entered Dolly Deacon. There were tears in her eyes.

"What's amiss, Dolly?" he asked quickly.

The girl hesitated a moment, and then:

"Why ever did you start this hateful shop?" she cried. "What made you do it? What made you do it?"

Joe's eyes opened wide.

"What made me do it?" he repeated. "For a living, I suppose."

"Couldn't you have found one some other way? Some other way that didn't mean taking the bread out of another man's mouth?"

"Whose mouth am I taking the bread out of?" he demanded.

"Your father's!"

"You know perfectly well."

"Then he's feeling the draught."

"It is cruel of you to brag about it," cried Dolly indignantly. "He's an old man, Joe. And you've ruined him."

Joe moistened his lips.

"I'm sorry," he said. "I'm real sorry. And if it's any consolation to him he may as well know that I'm done in too. We're cutting each other's throats. That's what we're doing."

The shop bell rang again, and a silk-hatted man entered. Joe's heart beat faster as he recognized Mr. Trueman, of Shingleton's.

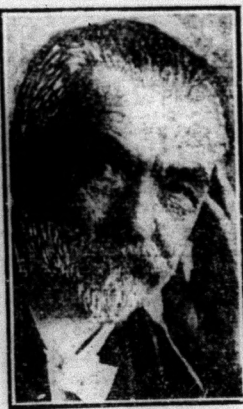

"Mr. Paxton!" asked Mr. Trueman.

"Yes."

"Could you spare me a few minutes?"

"Certainly," Joe glanced towards Dolly, and the girl left the shop.

Mr. Trueman came to the point at once.

D. W. Ross.

Formerly County Crown Attorney of Bruce, one of the early graduates of Toronto University who died in Toronto recently.

"I want to take over these premises," he said. "Are you open to an offer?"

"If it's good enough," grinned Joe. "We're doing big business here now."

Mr. Trueman smiled a trifle contemptuously.

"If you don't believe me you can look at our books," continued Joe. "Eventually Mr. Trueman did examine the books."

"What's your price?" he asked.

"Make an offer," replied Joe.

Mr. Trueman's offer was considerably more than Joe expected. Time was of more importance to Mr. Trueman than money and he wanted to clinch the matter there and then.

"I accept," said Joe, shortly, provided the deal is carried through before Thursday."

Mr. Trueman turned to the door. "Our solicitor will call on you to-morrow morning," he said. "Good-day."

On Thursday morning Mr. Deacon was despondently surveying his fly-blown stock when Joe Paxton entered his shop.

The old man's face grew black with wrath.

"Good-morning," said Joe pleasantly. "I thought you'd like to know that I've given up the shop over the way."

The old man's eyes glittered venomously.

"I thought you'd come to that," he growled. "Mrs. Baker's been talking."

"That's one of her faults," said Joe. "And how are things going with you?"

"Mind your own business."

"That's just what I'm trying to do. As a matter of business, Mr. Deacon, could you do with fifty pounds?"

"None of your cheek, you young jackanapes! If you don't get out of my shop—"

"I've got it with me," Joe spread out ten crisp notes on the counter.

Mr. Deacon looked enviously at the money.

"Away with you!" he shouted suddenly.

"Look here, let's get to business, Mr. Deacon. I've got an offer to make," said Joe. "I've sold the business to Shingleton's. Mrs. Baker is going to London with her share. I'm prepared to pay your debts and take over your business. There's one condition."

"Well, what is it?" Mr. Deacon spoke more gently.

"That you let Dolly and me get married right away. You may as well," he urged.

And Mr. Deacon, finding circumstances too strong for him, gave in.

"Is it quite fair to start in opposition to Shingleton's when you've sold them your business?" Dolly asked, later on.

"There'll be plenty of room for both of us," said Joe. "And I guess I'll keep my own customers."

BE THANKFUL, JOHN.

Old Age Not to Blame for Every Ill that Flesh is Heir to.

"How are you, to-day?" said a Scottish landlord to one of his tenants on meeting him on the road.

"Vera weel, sir, vera weel," answered John in his usual way, "gin it wasna for the rheumatism in my right leg."

"Ah, well, John, be thankful, for there is no mistake you are getting old like the rest of us, and old age does not come alone."

"Auld age, sir," replied John. "I wonder to hear ye, Auld age has nothing to do with it. Here's my ither leg just as auld, and it is quite sound and soopple yet."

—Another Name.

"Father, don't men call themselves bachelors before they get married?"

"Yes, my boy."

"And what do they call themselves after, dad?"

"Hush! It isn't fit for little boys to know."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

INTERNATIONAL LESSON,
APRIL 5, 1914.

Lesson 1. Christ's Table Talk.

Luke 14. 7-24. Golden Text,
Luke 14. 11.

In Luke's narrative the events of to-day's lesson follow closely upon those of the lesson for March 22. The review lesson which has intervened should not be permitted to obscure the close relation of thought. The account of the healing of the dropsical man on the Sabbath (verses 1-6) belongs to the longer division of the Gospel (14. 1 to 17. 10) devoted to the second period of the journey of Jesus to Jerusalem. The whole section is peculiar to Luke.

Verse 7. A parable—This word has several meanings. Usually it was a story told to illustrate a truth. Here it means a piece of advice.

Those that were bidden—A Pharisee had invited Jesus and other guests to dine at his house.

The chief seats—According to the Talmud, the middle place on a couch intended for three was the worthiest, that on the left the second in honor, and that on the right third. Jesus seems, however, to refer to the position of the couches.

8. A marriage feast—This was a formal dinner where the rank of the guests would be considered.

9. Thou shalt begin with shame to take the lowest place—The displaced guest would have to take the lowest seat because the intermediate places would have been filled in the meantime. The thought expressed by Jesus is found in Prov. 25. 7.

10. Sit down in the lowest place—Not in order to be promoted before the company, but to allow the host to choose those whom he wishes to honor.

11. For everyone that exalteth himself shall be humbled; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted—An utterance several times repeated by Jesus. See Luke 18. 14; Matt. 23. 12. Self-seeking invites its own rebuke, while humility and modesty are no hindrance to just recognition and preferment.

A Lesson On True Hospitality.

12. He said to him also that had bidden him—The previous discourse was addressed to the guests; Jesus now addresses the host, and seems to indicate that there was a selfish motive for his hospitality.

Call not thy friends, nor thy brethren, nor thy kinsmen, nor rich neighbors—The four classes likely to be asked on ordinary social grounds. The tense of the verb "call" is present and means rather "do not habitually call." Social invitations are not condemned, but our hospitality should not end there.

14. Thou shalt be recompensed—Good deeds never fail of their reward.

The resurrection of the just—Possibly a reference to the doctrine of a double resurrection, first of the just, and later a general resurrection. Compare 1 Cor. 15. 23; 1 Thess. 4. 16; Rev. 20. 5, 6.

15. Jesus's words about the resurrection of the just suggest the kingdom of God, and one guest assumes that he will enjoy its benefits. The parable that follows may be intended as a gentle rebuke to his self-complacency.

16. A certain man made a great supper—This parable suggests that many care less for the kingdom of God and its blessings than they profess to care. Compare this with the parable in Matt. 22, which is in some respects similar, but much more severe than this.

17. Sent forth his servant at supper time—This second summons to a feast still would be equal to canceling the first invitation. To refuse this second summons would be considered by the Arabs equivalent to a declaration of war. The summoner here represents God's messengers to his people, especially John the Baptist and Jesus. Read Matt. 11. 28, 30.

Come; for all things are now ready—Compare with John's message, Matt. 3. 2.

18. With one consent—The people acted as if they had previously conspired together. They all pleaded that they were too much occupied to come. Had this been the case they should have excused themselves when the first invitation came.

19. Prove—Used in the old sense of try or test, as in our expression, "the exception proves the rule."

20. A years immunity from military or civil service was granted to a newly married man. Deut. 24. 3.

21. Being angry—The behavior of the guests had been such as to justify the host's indignation.

23. Into the highways and hedges—This class refers to the heathen or Gentiles. Those from the streets and lanes of the city were poor Jews.

Constrain—This does not imply that force was to be used. The passage has been so misunderstood as to be quoted as proof that Jesus favoured religious persecution. The word really means "earnestly persuade," indicating that among the Gentiles a more earnest, persistent kind of preaching would be necessary to make them feel welcome. Matt. 8. 8, and 15. 27 illustrate the timidity of the Gentiles who came to Jesus.

24. This verse suggests that some of the first guests, who indifferently put off the invitation, may appear later when it will be too late to partake of the supper.

THE RICHEST GERMAN.

The Emperor Is Estimated to Be Worth, $98,500,000.

In connection with the heartburnings with which every propertyed German is now suffering over the war tax declarations, Rudolf Martin, the well-known statistician and compiler of the year book of German millionaires, says that the Kaiser, and not Frau Krupp von Bohlen and Halbach, is the richest person in Germany.

Herr Martin explains that he must revise all his previous estimates of the Kaiser's wealth, hitherto fixed at $25,000,000, and put it down at $98,500,000.

The new figures are arrived at by a recomputation of the value of the Kaiser's forest properties and farming lands. What such really is actually worth, according to Herr Martin, is shown by the valuation placed by the Deutsche Bank on the timber lands and farming estates of the Kaiser's friend, Prince Max Egon zu Furstenberg, who recently hypotheicated between 75,000 and 80,000 acres in the Black Forest as security for a loan of $4,500,000.

The Deutsche Bank, which underwrote the loan, informed the public that the lands were worth $23,550,000.

As the Kaiser's forests and farms are of the same general character, Herr Martin calculates that his Majesty's entire fortune can safely be estimated at only $1,500,000 below $100,000,000. Frau Krupp's fortune, Herr Martin thinks, has grown in 1914 to $80,000,000; but, on the same basis of computation as that employed to fix the fortune of the Kaiser, the second richest person in Germany is the Grand Duke Adolf Friedrich of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, a cousin of Queen Mary of England, who is put down as worth $88,750,000.

The fourth place among the rich persons of Germany is given to Prince Albert von Thurn und Taxis, who is said to be worth $67,500,000.

These four, the Kaiser, the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, Frau Krupp, and Prince Albert of Thurn und Taxis, therefore, should pay the heaviest contributions towards the $250,000,000 war tax if Herr Martin's figures be correct.

YOUNG GIRLS.

If fathers and mothers only knew it, they could often get light on the problem of training their children from the experience of experts in dealing with other people's children, even when those children tread a very different walk of life.

For obviously all sound conclusions drawn from experience with a group of human beings must apply in some degree to other human beings of the same age and sex.

A book entitled "Young Working Girls," recently compiled for the benefit of social workers, supplies a case in point. It gives the views of settlement workers all over the country on the question, "What is best for young working girls?"

The book contains nearly all there is to say on the subject. It is all illuminating, and the reader feels bound to accept at least those conclusions that are unanimous. The testimony is especially convincing when it corroborates traditional views, for settlement workers are free lances who seldom err in the direction of conservatism.

Three such traditional views the book restates with conviction. First, girls have a natural inclination to purity and modesty that exercises a remarkable effect for good on men. Secondly, this natural protection is not effective beyond a certain point; protection from without is sometimes necessary to save them from going beyond it. It is not wise to let them have their own way in the matter of going about unattended. Lastly, the best protection a girl can have is a good home.

Fathers and mothers who are trying hard to protect daughters who call them "unsympathetic" and "old-fashioned" should take heart to persist; some day the girls will thank them. Fathers and mothers who are letting their daughters "have their fling," and "do as the rest do," should take heed before it is too late.

Finally, since the girls feel that they can protect themselves, parents cannot expect them to desire or enjoy supervision, unless, through the home, they can have all the fun and freedom possible. One household must join hands with another. They must take turns in using their living rooms for games, their dining rooms for suppers, their kitchens for "candy pulls," and their horses and automobiles, and tennis courts, for the enjoy-

SUGARING OFF.

By Chas. M. Rice, Denver, Colo.

There is scarcely anything as suggestive of human happiness and unadulterated downright pleasure in this world comparable with the scenes in a Canadian "sugar bush," fifty years or so ago, at what was humbly designated as a "sugar off." That term to the small boy—and girl—concentrated about all of life's pleasures in one grand quintessential orgy, and even the "grown ups" were not exempt from its exhilarating allurements.

Nothing struck me so forcibly, and I confess, sadly, upon my present visit to my old Canadian home, as to see the wholesale slaughter and obliteration of the grand old forest, including those monarch maples that yielded the succulent sap so profusely in the spring months.

The sad truth that my Canadian brethren also had been hypnotized by the spirit of commercialism, was thus forced upon me. And yet it is doubtful if the policy of clearing the land of its forests is a good commercial stroke after all. Much might be said on both sides of the question, even as an economic proposition, but as a matter of sentiment, beauty and grandeur, the subject admits of but one presentation.

Your honorable Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, in a recent report, estimates that a Canadian produce about 20,000,000 pounds of maple sugar per year, of which Ontario is credited with about 3,000,000 pounds, and Quebec with the remaining sum. The Western provinces, having but few maple forests, the product was negligible and not worth mentioning.

Before the white man came to Canada, the Indian had discovered the secret of the maple tree. As spring approached he would gash the maple with his tomahawk and insert a wooden "spile," to guide the flowing sap into his rude birch-bark vessel. From him the early settlers learned the art, and soon improved on his crude methods; while modern science in agriculture has superseded the old methods of the early Ontario settler.

Instead of cutting wide gashes in the trees, as formerly, a small hole is bored, not more than two inches deep, in an upward direction, in which is inserted a metal spout. A tin bucket is hung on this spout to catch the dripping sap. This liquid has to be boiled for several hours in order that the watery portions be eliminated by evaporation, leaving the sweet syrup resid

SPRING BLOOD IS WATERY BLOOD

How to Get New Health and New Strength at This Season

Spring ailments are not imaginary. Even the most robust find the winter months most trying to their health. Confinement indoors, often in overheated and nearly always badly ventilated rooms—in the home, the office, the shop and the schools, taxes the vitality of even the strongest. The blood becomes thin and watery and is clogged with impurities. Some people have headaches and a feeling of languor. Others are low-spirited and nervous. Still others are troubled with disfiguring pimples and skin eruptions, while some get up in the morning feeling just as tired as when they went to bed. These are all spring symptoms that the blood is out of order and that a medicine is needed. Many people take purgative medicines in the spring. This is a serious mistake. You cannot cure yourself with a medicine that gallops through your system and leaves you weaker still. This is all that a purgative does. What you need to give you health and strength in the spring is a tonic medicine that will enrich the blood and soothe the jangled nerves. And the one always reliable tonic and blood builder is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These Pills not only banish spring weakness, but guard you against the more serious ailments that follow, such as anaemia, nervous debility, indigestion, rheumatism, and other diseases due to bad blood.

Mrs. Freeman Leslie, Greenwich, N.S., writes: "We have found Dr. Williams' Pink Pills the very best family medicine there is. I was completely run-down and could not sleep or do my work. I was very nervous and the least sound startled me. I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and they soon brought me back to the best of good health. They also cured my husband when he was suffering from a severe attack of rheumatism."

If you are ailing this spring you cannot afford, in your own interest, to overlook so valuable a medicine as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"FIT" AT FORTY.

Matured at Thirty, Between Thirty and Forty at His Best.

Experience has shown that mental activity in man has reached its greatest heights between the age of forty and fifty. Some of the world's greatest masterpieces in literature, music and art have been achieved by men bordering on the half-century.

Physically, however, according to Sir Ernest Shackleton, "under thirty a man, no matter how keen and fit, is still a man in the making. By thirty he has matured. Between thirty and forty he is at his best."

"I do not say," continues Sir Ernest, "that a man of twenty-six or twenty-seven may not have the physical endurance of older men; but, taking it all round, I think thirty and onwards is the best age. There have been cases of men of older age, such as Peary, who was about fifty-three when he did his last expedition; and Professor David, who made the journey to the Magnetic Pole in his last expedition, and climbed Mount Erebus—two of the hardest possible journeys in the Antarctic regions."

Sir Ernest himself is thirty-nine years of age, but with his mode of life he will probably remain, physically, thirty-nine for many years to come.

A Nova Scotia Case of Interest to All Women

Halifax Sends Out a Message of Help to Many People.

Halifax, N.S., Dec. 15.—When interviewed at her home at 194 Argyle St., Mrs. Haverstock was quite willing to talk of her peculiarly unfortunate case. "I was always 'blue' and depressed, felt weak, languid and utterly unfit for any work. My stomach was so disordered that I had no appetite. What I did eat disagreed. I suffered greatly from dizziness and sick headache and feared a nervous breakdown. Upon my druggist's recommendation I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

"I felt better at once. Every day I improved. In six weeks I was a well woman, cured completely after different physicians had failed to help me. It is for this reason that I strongly urge sufferers with stomach or digestive troubles to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

Dr. Hamilton's Pills strengthen the stomach, improve digestion, strengthen the nerves and restore debilitated systems to health. By cleansing the blood of long-standing impurities, by bringing the system to a high point of vigor, they effectually chase away weariness, depression and disease. Good for young or old, for men, for women, for children. All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and ADOPTING ENGLISH FASHIONS The Introduction of Knit Wear Has Effected a Change in China.

Many Chinese women are adopting Caucasian clothing, modified to suit Chinese taste. This change, though limited to a comparatively small number, is having a marked effect upon trade," writes Consul-General George E. Anderson of Hongkong. "Hongkong shop windows—the more fashionable shops that cater to Chinese trade—are full of modifications of foreign dress for the use of Chinese women, and manikins displaying styles are of a distinctly foreign cast. Formerly warmth in winter in China was obtained by a series of garments of various qualities and weights—the number of undergarments, all similar to the outer garment, being proportioned to the temperature. The introduction of knit wear, however, has made these several layers of clothing unnecessary, and the change has resulted in a difference in the cut of outer garments. The coat, formerly reaching just below the hips, has been lengthened into what is practically a skirt, almost covering the trousers. In the cut of these skirts, or long coats, fashionable Chinese women now generally affect foreign styles."

A GOOD MEDICINE FOR LITTLE ONES

Baby's Own Tablets are an excellent remedy for little ones. They are a gentle laxative which sweetens the stomach, regulate the bowels, banish constipation, worms, colds and simple fevers, and make the child happy, healthy and strong. Concerning them Mrs. Pierre Toussaint, Ste. Sophie de Levard, Que., writes: "I have found Baby's Own Tablets an excellent remedy for my little ones and would not be without them." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

POWER FROM SUNLIGHT.

Sun-Power Plant a Success, Says an Expert.

The result of the operation of the sun-power plant installed near Cairo, Egypt, seem very encouraging from an expert point of view, and the hope is expressed that this pioneer undertaking may meet with the full measure of success that it deserves.

The average amount of steam generated an hour throughout the trials was 1,169 pounds. The maximum amount of steam generated during any one hour was obtained between 1:10 and 2:10 p.m. on Aug. 22, and amounted to 1,443 pounds, while the minimum generated in any one hour was obtained between 3:15 and 4:15 p.m. on Aug. 25, and amounted to 886 pounds.

The total area of sunshine collected by that plant was 10,296 square feet. The average amount of steam produced throughout a four-hour trial on Aug. 10 was 693 pounds per hour. The mean steam pressure during the four hours was 1.2 pound per square inch below atmospheric pressure.

Not For Hire.

A small boy, who was sitting next to a very haughty lady in a crowded car kept on sniffling in a most annoying manner. At last the lady could no longer stand it, and turned to the lad. "Boy, have you got a handkerchief?" she demanded. The small boy looked at her for a few seconds, and then, in a very dignified tone, came the answer: "Yes, I have; but I don't lend it to strangers."

"Judge—How did you come to enter the premises? Prisoners—Well, your Honor, it was 2 in the morning, kitchen window wide open, no cops about—blowed if you wouldn't a-climbed in yourself."

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

And Her Kidney Disease and Female Weakness Disappeared—She Is Now a Strong, Healthy Woman.

Minnette, Gloucester Co., N.B., March 23.—(Special).—"I have been suffering from the kidneys ever since I was a child," says Miss J. M. Godin, of this place. "When I grew to womanhood I was told I was suffering from female weakness, so I tried several kinds of medicine, spending a good many dollars for nothing."

"Last winter I became so weak I was on the point of giving up my work. I could not sleep at night and could hardly get up the stairs without having palpitation of the heart and feeling quite exhausted."

"Reading of symptoms of Kidney Disease in Dodd's Almanac, I soon found out my case was similar, so I sent at once for four boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills. I began to feel a change at the very beginning. I felt well the very first night. Those four boxes did me more good than all the medicine I had taken before, and I have remained strong ever since. I am now as well as can be."

All women who suffer should look to the kidneys. They are the main-spring of health. Keep the kidneys strong by using Dodd's Kidney Pills and they will take care of the rest of the body.

DRUGS WITH BIG NAMES.

Modern Science Recalls Language of Shakespeare.

Strange remedies used by modern medicine, when read in a prescription, call to mind the time of witchcraft when mysterious creatures mixed strange liquids with which they worked scenes of horror among the people.

Only recently a pharmacist was required to compound a prescription in which one article was dried moles. To prepare this needed substance the animals are placed in a container and "roasted over a fire." Later, when powdered, the ash is used as an epileptic remedy.

Reuter, a German chemist, mentions a prescription of this year's date, which calls for two ounces of human fat, one ounce of natural mummy, a particle of new skin and one ounce of stag's fat.

Indeed, some modern science calls to mind the weird language of Shakespeare, when he mentions dragon's blood, wool of bat, and mummy's skin. If people saw a list of the drugs used by the chemist of to-day many would cease to be sick.

But while dragon's blood is one of the peculiarly named drugs, it does not come from any dragon. Other names, also, are merely trade names for beneficial remedies. If we read some cringing, hair-raising name in a prescription handed to us by our doctor, let us not worry. Prescriptions are couched in wondrous and confusing language.

Oysters in Algeria Have Faculty of Adaptability to Surroundings.

The interesting discovery has been made, according to a consular report from Algeria, of the adaptability of the oyster to change in its surroundings. The inspector of fisheries in the Arzew district states that he found that as the result of the slow closing of the mouth of the river La Maca by a sand-bar the edible oyster had almost completely adapted itself to an existence in fresh water. Oysters were found thriving in parts of the river entirely devoid of salt. It would seem from this, adds the inspector, that the adaptability of the oyster to changes in its surroundings—provided this takes place slowly—is very great, a fact that augurs well for the success of oyster farming.

Former President of Vassar College Advocates Education for Girls.

"College education makes women more marriageable, makes them wed quicker and remain more successfully married."

"The women of to-morrow will be the better educated sex; they are advancing in education while men are retrograding."

"Women are becoming more perfect physically than men because they love to be well, and through exercise and athletics are attaining their perfect form."

The foregoing is a statement from Dr. James H. Taylor, for nearly thirty years president of Vassar College. He has resigned his position and is now en route to Honolulu to visit his son.

DISCOVERY AT EDINBURGH.

Historic Remains of Ancient Fortress and Well Uncarved.

Mr. W. T. Oldrieve, chief architect of the Government Office of Works in Edinburgh, Scotland, who, two years ago, discovered at the rear of Holyrood Palace the foundation of one of the earliest Christian churches, has announced that he has discovered remains in Edinburgh Castle of the ancient fortress known as King David's Tower. He has also found the well which supplied the castle and garrison with water.

Excavations revealed much of King David's Tower still standing, its walls, eight feet thick, and rising to a height of nearly fifty feet above the original rock surface. On one side the structure had evidently suffered by bombardment, and this supposition has been proved by the recovery from the interior of the tower of many articles, including cannon balls. The disappearance of the tower is explained by the fact that the Half Moon Battery, a feature of Edinburgh Castle which has existed for nearly 350 years, covers it up entirely. Stalagmites rising from the ground, some extending to seven feet six inches long, and the size of the stalactites from the roofs show that the vaults of the tower have not been disturbed for a very long time.

This discovery led to the finding of the ancient well, which Mr. Oldrieve regards as one of the most interesting in Britain. Water was found in it to a depth of sixty feet. The well was pumped dry, cleaned out, and thoroughly surveyed.

Dangerous Throat Troubles Prevented by Nerviline

IT ENDS MISERY OF COLDS QUICKLY.

Don't wait till night.

Get after your cold now—this very minute, before it grows dangerous you should apply old-time "Nerviline."

Rub your chest and throat, rub them thoroughly with Nerviline. Relief will be immediate.

Nerviline will save you from lying awake to-night, coughing, choking and suffering from congestion in the chest and acute pain in the throat.

Nerviline will break up that dull neuralgia headache—will kill the cold and chill at its very beginning—will save you from perhaps a serious illness.

To take away hoarseness, to break up a grippy cold, to cure a sore throat or bad cold in the chest, you can use nothing so speedy and effective as Nerviline. For forty years it has been the most largely used family remedy in the Dominion. Time has proved its merit, so can you by keeping handy on the shelf the large 50c. family size bottle; small trial size 25c., sold by any dealer anywhere.

The hotel patron had waited fully an hour for a very slow waiter to serve two courses. "Now, my man," he said to the waiter, "can you bring me some tomato salad?" "Yes, sir," said the waiter. "And," continued the customer, "while you're away you might send me a picture postcard every now and then."

HABIT OF UNHAPPINESS.

Is a Most Unfortunate One to Contract, Especially in Early Life.

Most unhappy people have become so by gradually forming a habit of unhappiness, complaining about the weather, finding fault with their food, with crowded trains, and disagreeable companions or work. A habit of complaining, of criticism, of fault-finding, or grumbling over trifles, a habit of looking for shadows, is a most unfortunate habit to contract, especially in early life, for after a while the victim becomes a slave. All of the impulses become perverted, until a tendency to pessimism, or cynicism, is chronic.

Plague of Wild Horses.

The horses abandoned during the gold rush to the Yukon in 1897 and 1898 have bred a race of wild descendants which are making such depredations in the Peace River country in western Alberta and in eastern British Columbia that the Government has been asked to take some measures to check them. The horses have been making raids on the ranches, killing many domestic horses and leading away valuable mares which had been imported at considerable expense by the settlers.

HAIR CAME OUT BY HANDFULS

With Dandruff and Itching Scalp. Scalp Covered with Small Pimples. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Now No Trouble At All.

503 Jane St., Toronto, Ont.—"I was first troubled with my hair getting brittle and later dandruff and itching scalp. I was afraid to comb my hair as it came out by handfuls and the itching was so severe I was miserable. The trouble kept me from sleeping. My scalp was covered with small pimples which seemed to run into one another and form a scab. The dandruff was so bad I was afraid to comb my hair as it made it itch so plainly. I looked very badly. I was thinking of having my head shaved."

"For a long time I tried—and several other remedies but they did not cure it. After some months I picked up a paper with the Cuticura Soap and Ointment advertisement and sent right away for a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. On using just the sample my trouble was better. I used six or eight boxes of the Cuticura Soap and Ointment and my scalp healed, the itching stopped and my hair came in quite thick and now I have no trouble at all." (Signed) Mrs. H. Binger, May 27, 1912.

It costs nothing to learn how pure, sweet, effective and skinifying Cuticura Soap and Ointment are in the treatment of poor complexion, red, rough hands, itching scalp, dandruff, dry, thin and falling hair, because you need not buy them until you try them. Obituary

MRS. S. ELLIOTT

In Madoc on Thursday, March 20th, there occurred the death of Mrs. Samuel Elliott, aged 29 years. Mrs. Elliott, whose maiden name was Annie Douglas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Douglas, of Crookston, moved to Madoc with her husband in the fall of 1913 where she remained up to the time of her death.

The heartfelt sympathy of the community goes out to the bereaved husband.

JAMES O'HARA

Mr. James O'Hara, who passed away on March 22nd, was the first white boy born in the township of Madoc. He attended the first Public school in the township, heard the first sermon preached to the white man and saw the country changed from a wilderness to a smiling country, peopled with a happy and prosperous people. Where this village now stands the tall and stately hemlock spread its giant branches over the waters of the great creek. The wagon road or trail ran along the west bank of the river down to the old Seymour smelting iron furnace. How little would the stranger to these parts imagine that all these changes had taken place within the lifetime of a citizen. Mr. James O'Hara's father came to this township in 1821 from Jefferson county, New York. James O'Hara was a member of the A. F. & A. M. for 52 years, in religion a Methodist, in politics Liberal. Mr. and Mrs. James O'Hara celebrated their fifty years of wedded life in 1888. In January, 1889, Mrs. O'Hara died. Mr. O'Hara has two brothers still living. Charles, of this village, now in his 82nd year, still hale and hearty; Henry in Sask.; and five children: Benson, of Madoc; Lester, of Eldorado; Frank and Miss Minnie, on the homestead; and Mrs. Gawley, of Ingleford, Sask.

Beautiful Hair--a Clean
Cool Scalp

Use Parisian Sage. It Makes the Hair Fluffy and Abundant

It is needless for you to have hair that is anything short of perfect. If it is falling out, losing color, splitting, or if the scalp burns and itches, immediately get from T. G. Whitehead, or any drug counter, a 2-cent bottle of Parisian Sage--use it frequently--the first application removes dandruff, invigorates the scalp, and beautifies the hair until it is gloriously radiant.

Parisian Sage supplies hair needs--it is perfectly harmless. It contains the exact elements required to make the hair soft, wavy, glossy and to make it grow thick and beautiful.

You will surely like Parisian Sage. It is one of the best and most delightful hair tonics known.

If You Can't Boost, Don't Knock

Our friend, Brer Correll, of the Stirling News-Argus, in reporting the tour of Mr. Frank Doyle, secretary of the Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association to stimulate the interest in the grand old game in this district, says: "We will likely have some broken bones by lacrosse sticks to chronicle the coming season." Brer Correll is evidently thinking of the use of the shillalah at Donnybrook Fair and not of the scientific game of lacrosse.

Guilty or Not Guilty?

Some person or persons, in the strict sense of the word, is guilty of having broken the large thermometer, the property of Mr. Geo. Maybee, by burning matches under it. It is high time that such vandalism as this was stopped. Mr. Maybee has been kind enough to leave the thermometer where the public could read the various changes in the weather, and a few young hoodlums repay the kindness by wantonly destroying it. Take warning, boys, or you will find yourself in serious trouble some of these fine days.

The McKay Camp, No. 208, Sons of Scotland, held their annual At Home in the Masonic Hall, Tuesday evening, March 31st, on the official visit of Bro. Wm. McIntosh, Deputy District Grand Master. McKay Camp issued invitations to over fifty of their friends. Mr. George West, Master of the Camp, gave an address of welcome and the District Deputy spoke of the merits of the order and advised every citizen in whose veins ran a drop of Scottish blood to become associated with the order. Mr. McIntosh then favored the audience with a number on the bagpipes whose thrilling music has always been dear to a Scotchman's ears. The Sills' Orchestra furnished music for the dances and won encomiums by the excellence of their musical program. The At Home was voted a great success and the invited guests are indebted to the McKay Camp for a very enjoyable evening and we have no doubt but that the Camp will receive many additions to their numbers.

Any Morning Now

You are likely to be awakened by the joyous notes of Mr. Robin Red Breast as he sits in the tree outside your window calling to the world at large and you in particular: "Spring is here! Spring is here! Are you ready to enjoy the most beautiful time of the year when flowers spring into being and the green grass sprouts from the soil?"

You cannot fully enjoy it if your system does not adapt itself to the changed conditions.

During the cold winter weather your blood has become full of heat producing elements. These have now become unnecessary, but getting rid of them throws a greater burden upon the blood-renewing organs of your body than they can take of. The result is that disagreeable, overheated, tired feeling popularly known as "Spring Fever."

What your system needs is a good blood renovator or purifier and as such we recommend Nyal's Blood Purifier because we know what it is made of. Nyal's Blood Purifier will promptly eliminate this waste heat matter, effectually purifying the blood and increasing the circulation. It will make your step springy and buoyant—make springtime for you a most enjoyable season.

THE PANAMA CANAL TOLLS

A Bitterly Contested Legislative Struggle Confronts President Wilson's Administration

A despatch from Washington says: Lines were sharply drawn for the opening of the most bitterly contested legislative struggle that has confronted President Wilson's Administration—the fight to repeal the law giving American coastwise ships free passage through the Panama Canal. For the first time since the Democratic Administration took charge of the Government Administration, leaders found a strong, resourceful and determined element within the party opposed to a policy which President Wilson had personally espoused. Personal convictions on the question have practically obliterated party lines. This political situation, with the international character of the question involved, and the stress the President has placed upon his position as necessary to the successful conduct of the Administration's foreign policy, combined to make up a situation fraught with complications. Aligned against the President's demand for the repeal are the three leaders of the parties in the House, Rep. Underwood, of the Democrats; Rep. Mann, of the Republicans, and Rep. Burdock, of the Progressives. Wings of all three parties are behind these leaders. It was generally believed that majority leader Underwood and other Democrats, while speaking against the bill and voting against it, would not attempt to organize any extended opposition, or resort to obstructive tactics to prevent the passage of the bill. The supporters of the President are prepared to argue that the exemption of American ships from canal tolls is a violation of the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty; that it is a form of subsidy to special interests, and the repeal is essential in order that the President may carry out his foreign policy. On the other hand, the opponents of the bill will declare that American shipping needs the free use of the canal, that transcontinental railroads fear the competition of free American ships, and that to repeal the free tolls section would be "trucking to Great Britain without exhausting diplomatic negotiations."

DECREASE IN EMIGRATION.

Remarkable Reduction in Sailings From Old Land.

A despatch from London says: Emigration returns for the last few months show a remarkable decrease compared with last year in the number leaving for Canada, the comparisons showing:

	1913.	1912.
December	1,999	3,070
January	1,906	3,571
February	4,493	5,359

Figures for Australia and New Zealand show an even more remarkable reduction. It is probable that the gloomy letters to the press on the experiences or prospects of emigrants which have been common recently, are largely responsible for these reductions.

FOUND HUSBAND DEAD.

Discovery Was Made By Wife on Returning From Work.

A despatch from Toronto says: Robert Ferguson, a Scotchman, aged 46, residing at 389 Adelaide Street west, was found dead in his room on Thursday. The discovery was made by his wife, who had returned from work. On entering her husband's room she found him lying on the bed apparently asleep. Being unable to arouse him she summoned Dr. W. Nelson, who stated that the man had been dead for some hours. He had been out of work for some time and was said to have been drinking heavily.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE HEALING

New York Legislature Places Healing on Same Level as Medical Practice

A despatch from Albany, N.Y., says: The McClellan-Thorn Bill, passed by the State Legislature by a vote of 79 to 50, legalizes the practice of Christian Science healing and places it on a level with ordinary medical science.

Commenting on the bill, which makes it possible for a patient to have recourse to mind cure without running contrary to the State medical law, James F. Lord, a son-in-law of Thomas F. Lawson, of Boston, and Robert S. Foss, who have been in Albany in favor of the bill, issued a statement declaring that the passage of the bill by the Legislature has enabled New York to take her rightful place among other progressive states in protecting by

State law the medical as well as the religious rights of their citizens. "For centuries," they said, "medical systems have been dosing the body with drugs and at the same time administering despair to the mind, expecting thereby to effect permanent cures. Body is not first and the mind secondary. Mrs. Eddy's great discovery, that it is the human mind that makes sick and the Divine mind that makes well is gradually receiving the recognition it deserves."

The McClellan-Thorn Bill amends the medical law so the people of the State may resort to Christian Science for help without violating in any way the provisions of the Medical Practice Act."

THIRTY YEARS FOR USURY

Montreal Man Attempts Suicide to Escape Long Term of Imprisonment

A despatch from Montreal says: W. H. Tapley, usurer, found guilty at the Assize Court, was sentenced to thirty years in the penitentiary by Mr. Justice Lavergne. The evidence upon which Tapley was convicted was supplied by his 14-year-old daughter. When he learned his fate the prisoner collapsed. As Tapley is nearly fifty, the sentence means life imprisonment for him. Tapley attempted to commit suicide by biting through his arm in an attempt to sever an artery. Tapley's callous methods as a money lender were mainly responsible for the Ottawa Government passing the usury law some years ago making it a penal offence to charge more than twelve per cent. interest on loans.

Lacrosse Booming

From the size of the gathering and the enthusiasm shown by those present at the lacrosse meeting in the council chamber last Friday night it looks as though Hastings was back on the map of the lacrosse country. Officers were elected and delegates chosen to attend the meeting of the Ontario Lacrosse Association in Toronto, to arrange groups and put the good old game back in its rightful place of true athletics.

The following officers were elected: Hon. President—A. B. Spellman. Hon. Vice-Pres.—Alex. Wilson. President—Dr. Wade. 1st Vice-Pres.—J. F. McCarthy. 2nd Vice-Pres.—W. Runkels. 3rd Vice-Pres.—M. Baker. Secretary—J. J. McPherson. Treasurer—E. H. Hill. —Hastings Star.

You bet we have, Bier Lancaster. We have an egg on exhibition weighing 6 ounces and measures 7½x5½ inches and was produced by a pullet. Come again.

Few murders have aroused such world wide interest as the murder of H. M. Arnold, manager of the Bank of Montreal at Plum Coulee, Man., owing to the boldness of the manner in which the robbery was carried out and the escape from the Winnipeg jail of John Krafchenko charged with the crime. It is of special interest to the readers of the Review from the fact that W. H. Hastings, who is conducting the prosecution, formerly practised law in this village.

Tale of Lost Timber on Trent Watershed

The Trent Watershed Survey by C. S. Howe and J. H. White, issued by the Commission of Conservation, serves to exhibit in detailed manner the consequences of mismanagement under the old system of timber licenses, consequences which the commissioners declare warrant a discontinuance of that system.

At the present time the pine has practically all been taken from the Trent watershed and fires have repeatedly swept the remaining timber growth so that it is of little commercial value, and a man-made desert has resulted over much of the area. In the townships of Methuen, Anstruther and Burleigh alone, nearly 150,000 acres of such desert exist. After half a century of the opening of settlement in this region 2,100 square miles contain less than 15,000 people, and hardly 10 per cent. of 35 townships included in the survey have been cleared for farm purposes. That farming on a shallow glacial drift is a mistake is shown by the multitude of abandoned farms, 1,004 of which were for sale for taxes in 1911. The decrease in population has been 156 per cent. in the last decade.

The annual loss from an average of 14,000 acres burned over each year is calculated at $20,000. There is nevertheless still prospects of values in the young pine and poplar of protection of 8,000,000, the capital value of this young forest, if properly managed, is set at $50,000,000. The bulk of the land is privately owned, 725 square miles being crown lands under the Province.

The commission recommends the relocation of the farming population of the Trent Valley upon suitable lands elsewhere, and reforestation under Provincial ownership.

Literary Notes

Rod and Gun for April is out with a bill of fare designed primarily for the fisherman. Our Funny Language

A sleeper is one who sleeps. A sleeper is that in which a sleeper sleeps. A sleeper is that on which the sleeper runs while the sleeper sleeps. Therefore while the sleeper sleeps in the sleeper, the sleeper carries the sleeper over the sleeper under the sleeper until the sleeper which carries the sleeper jumps the sleeper and wakes the sleeper in the sleeper by striking the sleeper under the sleeper on the sleeper, and there is no longer any sleep for the sleeper sleeping in the sleeper on the sleeper.

Hymeneal

On Wednesday evening, March 18th, the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wilkinson, Queensboro, was the scene of a very pretty wedding, when their only daughter, Margaret F., was united in marriage to Mr. James H. Harris, of Senlac, Sask., Rev. C. J. Young officiating. Miss Margaret Hunter, cousin of the groom, played the wedding march. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of emerald velvet and real lace over silk, and carried a bouquet of white carnations. The young couple were unattended. After congratulations about fifty guests repaired to the dining-hall, where a splendid dinner was well served. The number of beautiful and costly presents received testified as to the high esteem in which they were held. After a most enjoyable evening had been spent, Mr. and Mrs. Harris left with the best wishes of a large circle of friends for their new home in Senlac, the bride travelling in a navy blue tailored suit with hat to match.

The Kidneys, Bowels, and Skin are the "human sewers" which carry off the impurities in the blood. When these are clogged Uric Acid sediment lodges in the muscles and joints and Rheumatism follows. Rheuma, the great remedy for all forms of the terrible disease, checks the deposit of Uric Acid.

A Foolish Young Man;

Or, the Belle of the Season.

Stafford laughed with his usual appreciation of his friend's amusing cynicism; but he did not correct him. For at that moment, the neat maid-servant brought in the trout, which proved to be piping hot and of a golden-brown; and the two men commenced a dinner which, as compared with the famous, or infamous, of the London restaurant, was a bottle of claret, which actually was cradle, which even Howard deigned to approve of; and the two men after they had lingered over their dinner, got into easy-chairs beside the fire and smoked their cigars with that sweet contentment which only tobacco can produce, and only then when it follows a really good meal.

"Do you know how long you are going to stay at your father's little place?" Howard asked, after a long and dreamy silence.

Stafford shrugged his shoulders slightly.

"For my word, I don't know," he answered. "I'm like the schoolboy; I don't know nothing. I suppose I shall come to that I suppose he doesn't know how long that will be. I've got to reward him as a kind of atonement for his here today and gone to-morrow, always on the wing, and never resting anywhere for any time. I've never surprised when I hear that, though his last letter was dated Africa, he has flown back to Europe or has run over to Australia."

"Yes," said Howard, musingly, "there is an atmosphere of mystery and romance about your esteemed parent, Sir Reuben Crme, which smacks of the 'Arabian Nights,' my dear Stafford. Man of the world as I am, I must confess that I regard him with a kind of wondering awe, and that I follow his erratic movements very much as one would follow the celestial progress of a particularly splendid comet. He never ceases to love to read of his gigantic projects, his vast wealth, his brilliant successes, and I tell you frankly that I am looking forward to seeing him with a mixture of fear and curiosity. Do not be surprised, if, at my introduction, I fall on my knees in Oriental abasement. I have admired him so much and so long, at a distance, that he has assumed in my eyes an almost regal, not to say imperial, importance."

"I hope you will like him," said Stafford, with a touch of that simplicity which all his friends liked.

one time they owned more land than any other of the big families here; miles and miles of it, with some of the best farms. But that was before my time. I thought I've heard my father tell of it; the date and the home meadows. He sighed as he spoke and looked sadly at the estate car which he was smoking. The feudal spirit still exists in the hearts of the men who were born in these remote dales and towering hills, and the landlord of the little inn was as proud of the antiquity of his family, and as sorry for its broken fortunes as any viceroy of the middle ages could have been for the misfortunes of his feudal baron.

"Heron Hall used to be a fine place at one time, sir. I can remember my father describing what it was in his and his father's days; how there used to be scores of servants, and as many as fifty horses in the stables, with the great place filled with guests summer and winter, spring and autumn. The Squire less than four horses, and once, when he was high sheriff, he rode to meet the judges with six. It was open house to every poor man in the place, and no wanderer was ever turned away from the door. The squire of my father time was the county member, and the day he was elected there were two big hogheads of port and two of brandy brought on the lawn in front of the terrace; and for a week afterwards there was scarcely a sober man in the town for miles round. He was master of the hounds, and the hunt breakfasts and the hunt balls were more splendid than anything else of that kind in the kingdom. Yes, the Herons made Herendale famous, as you may say, sir.

He paused and shook his head, and Stafford remained silent; he was too wise to break in upon the narrative. The landlord sighed and looked lovingly at his cigar, then went on:

"They offered that squire—Miss Ida's grandfather—a peerage; the Herons had often been offered a baronetcy; but they'd always refused, and the squire declined the peerage. He said that no man could wish to be higher than a Heron, of Herendale; that better men than he had been contented with it, and he was quite satisfied with the rank which had satisfied his forefathers. When he died, the followers at the funeral made a procession a mile and a quarter long."

"How did the family lose its money, drop its greatness?" Stafford asked.

The landlord screwed up his eyes thoughtfully.

"Well, it's hard to tell, sir," he replied. "Of course there was always a tremendous drain going on; for it was not only down there that the squire sent the money freely; but it was just the same or worse when he was in London; he had a big house there, and end-on, he became more reserved than ever, avoided all his father's old friends and shut himself up at the Hall and kept himself to himself. He is a college gentleman and fond of books, and he spends all his time alone in his library."

"But he was a squire, and a squire should be a squire," Stafford said.

"Yes, sir, but he was a squire, and a squire should be a squire," Stafford said.

"Yes, sir, but he was a squire, and a squire should be a squire," Stafford said.

one of the relatives, and she's only been back a couple of years, no matter how far away.

"Poor girl," said Stafford, involuntarily.

"Well, yes, you may say that, sir," said the landlord, but doubtfully; "though it don't seem as if Miss Ida was in need of much pity; she is so bright and—and high spirited, as you may say; though it's a wonder she can be so, seeing the life she leads, alone in that great place with her father, who never goes beyond the garden, and who shuts himself up with his books all day. Yes, it's a wonder, when you come to think of it, that she can smile and laugh and be as cheerful as she is. I often hear her singing when she's riding through the dale or along the road here. Miss Ida's wonderfully liked by all the people, sir; in fact, you might say that they were all her."

The April Crop Bulletin Shows Favorable Outlook in Ontario

Information furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture published in their April crop bulletin regarding agricultural conditions in the Province is to the effect that fall wheat is starting April in nearly the same condition in which it entered the winter, having received little injury from the low temperatures of the first quarter of the year. The present appearance is most encouraging. With regard to fruit trees, despite the cold weather, the present outlook is considered satisfactory. The San Jose scale and the tent caterpillar are more to be feared than sudden dips in temperature. The clover outlook is bright.

The wintering of live stock caused anxiety to many farmers owing to the severe cold, but many claim that the rather steady cold weather was much better for carrying farm animals through than in the case of so-called mild winter. Horses, with the exception of some cases of distemper, did well. Cattle have also done well and are remarkably free from disease. Fodder supplies have been ample to supply all needs.

CAPTAIN HUGH RODMAN.

Approaching Canada.

The United States Congress seems vexed over Canadian advertising among American farmers. The latest news has come from a committee which has been sending about $60,000 a year for advertising—and also for "traveling expenses"—to her borders in the last ten years. Senator Hugh Rodman, an advertising manager, spoke as follows:

"You were hired by a foreign country to do an act of disloyalty to your own country. Are you not ashamed?" Mr. Washington said he did not intend to circulate such matter as that in his country. He was told that the lobby committee has added that the lobbies clear of evidence. He reported and get a job. "Canada," remarks the New York Telegraph.

"Some day the United States will annex Canada, and it is not surprising that thousands of you have a few hundred thousand of your people already in the section. The new way ahead. Canada will welcome them." "The name looks like a Telegaph's own people" without wor-Telegraph's "own people" without wor-Telegraph's "own people" without wor-ing about "some day." It is time enough to cry out when we are hurt and at present are getting along nicely.

Capt. Hugh Rodman, U.S.N., will be the real boss of the big Panama sluiceway, when it is open for commercial shipping next July, and will have entire charge of all the details of putting ships through.

All vessels entering the canal will have a canal pilot who will take the ship to an anchorage, from where she may not move without permission of Capt. Rodman or one of the port captains, conveyed through the pilot.

All the officials who visit here must report to Capt. Rodman, head of the Department of Canals.

True Economy

The suggestion that macadam roads that he not constructed anywhere and that brick paved highways be made the rule has much to commend it. The cost of making a brick paved road is twice as much per mile as that of macadam, but much per mile as that of the latter is the cost of repaving a brick road is figured at twenty times as much a year as the upkeep of a brick road. Macadam roads did well enough when nothing better was in sight, but the character of the vehicular traffic has greatly changed. Automobiles wear out macadam roads faster than wagons did, and brick pavement for automobile traffic is so much better. The increased cost of the brick roads in the end is ed cost of the brick roads in the end is true economy.

Tolerance in China.

President Yuan Shi Kai has issued a mandate explaining that in proscribing the worship of Confucius he does not establish Confucianism as the official form of worship for the people of other religions. "The choice of religions is still left to the people," and diversions of faith from whatever cause will be respected.

But the President intends to see to it that the sages of old shall have due honor and that political changes shall not deprive them of their worship. The President steps into the place of the Emperor upon the highest terrace of the Altar of Heaven, formerly reputed to be the centre of the universe, that he may there intercede in behalf of the tens of millions whose lot is little changed by the passing of the old order and the humiliation of the Operation. As soon as a ship n toward the canal, its wireless all signal arrangements will b der the immediate control of the Manchus. The Manchus edict of seven years ago that required formal veneration of the emperor in the temples and put this worship on a parity with that of heaven and earth. Yungkuang, the emperor, coupled it with the annunciation of a new system of government to the bigoted Manchus. It is in line with his conciliatory attitude toward them, his Christian faith, with which Confucianism has many points of resemblance. The emperor's edict shall be "the sacrifice offering to heaven that is a universal ceremony." Buddhism on one side and agnosticism on the other, which are the two main religions of acceptance of Christianity.

Turkey's Constitution.

Even Turkey is suffering constitutional pains. The general election which took place recently resulted in an overwhelming majority for the Young Turks. The mechanism of the election is, unfortunately, less than satisfactory than its electoral ground-work. At the last general election the reelectors were those used for the first time, established under Midhat Pasha in 1876, and "suspended" from 1877 until the revolution of 1908. Since then the law has been revised extensively during the war or since. There is one million electors, 60,000. There is one delegate, and every 600 voters are entitled to elect a delegate; these delegates then meet at a constituency and elect the actual members. Thus the second stage of the election is the election of the actual members by the electors, and there have been bitter complaints that the Christian population has been under-represented, especially in Armenia. No doubt the question of the Young Turks come up for the decision of the powers. Constitutionalism must be upheld at all costs, even in Mortality From Pneumonia.

Croupous or lobar pneumonia, so-called because of its affecting an entire lobe of the lung, is one of the most fatal forms of that disease, and the discovery of a serum for it is a thing of which the world has heard. This is another triumph for the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research, which is doing much to combat the most common disease, and as in the case of the typhoid serum and the diphtheria antitoxin the same result has been a long and painstaking task before it was offered to the public as a cure. Three years of experiment have resulted in this, and now the gratifying announcement that mortality from pneumonia will now be greatly reduced has been made. The institute recently added a million dollars to the endowment fund for the establishment of a department for the study of tropical diseases.

Villa Strips Northern Mexico of Its Entire Population of Subjects of King Alfonso.

A despatch from El Paso says: Seven hundred Spanish exiles from Torreon have entered Texas. With their removal, Northern Mexico is practically stripped of its entire population, which a few years ago numbered thousands. The exile of the Spaniards is the result of one of the first acts of Pancho Villa after he had captured Torreon. The work of clearing the streets of corpses and searching for the last Federal stragglers had not yet been completed before the order expelling Spaniards from Torreon was given. So important did he consider the work of riding the Laguna district of Spaniards, that but 24 hours was given to the unfortunate to secure meagre personal belongings and go to the station where, under heavy guard, they entrained and were hurried to the border. It was early morning when the refugee train arrived. In the coaches the women and children had been riding, while the men were given quarters in box cars and cabooses. In the chill morning the train arrived at the Juarez train station and remained there until dawn, when the exiles were untethered and huddled in the yards and in the yards, afraid to leave the train in the rebel border town.

In spite of the fact that their property has been confiscated, those who were the wealthiest have assisted the poorer ones in such way as they could, and none of the refugees are destitute.

Fullness After Meals

"When I was working around farm last winter I had an attack of inflammation," writes Mr. E. P. Dawkins of Port Richmond. "I was weak for long time, but well enough to get on until spring. But something was wrong with my bowels. I could not get any satisfaction or pleasure out of the food I ate. I kept losing weight, and the stomach-ache kept on all the time. I was eating there was pain and fullness all the symptoms of intestinal obstruction. Nothing helped me until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Instantly I was better. I was not hurting, like other pills, but was feeling very mildy, and soon began to eat and my bowels were regular. I was not required large quantities. I was satisfied with the results with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I feel better than I have for some time. I am sure, I have found a mild yet certain remedy. To-day I feel well—no pain, no sour stomach, good appetite, able to digest any food. This is a whole lot of good for a man who has been so long on medicine to do, and I can say that Hamilton's Pills are the best pills I have ever used. I can say no more, but I am sure, proves it."

Refuse a substitute for Dr. J. C. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrala and Butcher's Kidney Pills. They are sold everywhere in solid yellow boxes, 25c. All others are cheap imitations. Get the Catarrhazone Co., Kingston, N. Y.

Hawaiian Heiress.

A despatch from San Francisco says: Probably the first wireless who ever got a decree of divorce is Mrs. Marie K. Kono, a beautiful Hawaiian heiress, of Honolulu. Mrs. King, rich and well known right and a member of the well known Piilo family of Honolulu, separated from her husband, an oil man, in 1909. In April, 1911, she was granted an interlocutory decree of divorce by Judge Wasterlain and returned to her island estate. In Honolulu she is a wealthy man, whose name is withheld by her attorneys. They decided to wed, but at the last moment Mrs. King remembered that her final decree of divorce from her husband had never been granted. She sent wireless messages to her attorneys here, and as a result Judge Wasterlain, of Oakland, signed the final decree, which was at once wired to Honolulu.

Neatly Turned.

The bad boy wrote on the board: "Our teacher is a d—." The other boys anticipated when the schoolmaster arrived there were none. He merely wrote the word "driver" after "d" and opened school as usual.

Youngster Kicked Apparently Empty Can While Playing.

A despatch from Toronto says: Peter John Bolahood, aged 12, living at 123 York Street, kicked what he thought was an empty can lying on the ground in his back yard. The can immediately blew up with a loud report, and the boy was so injured by the explosion that he will lose the sight of one eye. He is in the General Hospital in a critical condition.

The police have been unable to find any trace of the exploded can, which seems to have been blown to atoms, and so are somewhat at a loss for a theory of the accident. They think it likely, however, that it had contained dynamite, and had been left there, unthinkingly by some of the foreign workmen living in the neighborhood who are employed on construction in the city.

Obituary

Another act in the tragedy of the Dale bank failure was closed Friday, when Mrs. John Thompson, eldest daughter of Mr. James Dale, was interred in the family burial lot in Lakeview cemetery, Madoc. Mrs. Thompson, only a year or two a bride, spent almost her whole life in this village, but on account of her supersensitive and retiring disposition was very imperfectly known except by her most intimate friends. To those she was a woman of the most delicate sensitiveness, a nature that shrank from the publicity to which her position might naturally have entitled her, a companion of rare charms of mind and heart and possessed of a conscience that compelled an unswerving obedience to its dictates. It has been our privilege to hear her say that she would rather suffer death, yes, willingly, than be false to what her conscience told her was right.

She died in Winnipeg on Sunday, April 6th. The remains were brought to the family home, W. V. Moore, where the Rev. M. Mounter preached the funeral sermon, assisted by the Rev. C. J. Young and Rev. E. A. Sanderson. The funeral was a large one and the display of flowers magnificent and abundant. It required the services of thirteen flower boys to carry the floral gifts of friends and sympathizers.

Owing to the unusual and extremely painful circumstances under which the event took place, the sympathy of the community is extended to the husband and the relatives of the late Mrs. Isabel Thompson.

Painful Accident

A very painful accident occurred to Mr. Wm. Volume, father of Mrs. T. H. Moore, of Queensboro, on Good Friday. Mr. Volume, accompanied by his daughter, were on their way to attend the funeral of Mrs. John Thompson, and when about a mile from home the horse took fright at a gasoline engine, which was running by the side of the road, and started to run away. Mr. Volume was thrown out of the buggy, landing on his head, which was severely cut and requiring five stitches to close the wound. Mrs. Moore was also thrown out but escaped injuries. Mr. Volume is progressing nicely and expects to be around in a day or two.

A Madoc Youth Visits Belleville

Mr. C. W. O'Hara, of Madoc, was in the city on Saturday and favored the Ontario with a friendly call and incidentally paid for his paper 12 months in advance. Mr. O'Hara is known in Madoc as "The Boy" and he is a boy in all the essentials, brightness of outlook, ruddy complexion, elasticity of movement, absence of "crow's feet," clearness of eye, steadiness of nerve and bounding health. The calendar says that he has passed the eighty-second milestone, but no one would believe any such statement if there were not records to prove it for Mr. O'Hara certainly does not look the part. He could easily pass for a prosperous business man in the city. About Mr. O'Hara is that he has remained all these years on the barren mountains of hachelordom. But the month of June is not yet past, and if Mr. O'Hara will only plead his cause in Cupid's court, it would make a very interesting story for The Daily Ontario and on the other hand serve to round out a useful and honorable career.—Belleville Ontario.

[Struck by the closing lines of the above paragraph, we instructed our reporter to interview Mr. O'Hara who blushing admitted that his youthful appearance and actions were due to the presence of the fascinating manners and attractive personality of a youthful stenographer in the office of the Ontario.]

LIFE INSURANCE FOR YOUR HOUSE

A TREE often lives several hundred years. Nature has protected the wood by covering it with bark to shield it from the elements.

When trees are sawed into lumber, Nature's protection is lost. Therefore, the wood used in your house must be paint protected to insure it against wear and weather.

"100% Pure" Paint is a good life insurance policy on your house. It protects against decay—pays for itself, over and over again, in the repairs it saves—adds value and beauty to the building as well as long life to the wood.

Martin-Senour "100% Pure" Paint is what we recommend for all outside and inside painting. "100% Pure" is genuine White Lead, Oxide of Zinc, purest Colors, and Linseed Oil—ground to extreme fineness by powerful machinery—the combination of which produces a paint that is greatest in hiding, covering and wearing qualities—and makes it the cheapest to use as well as the most satisfactory.

Let us help you in selecting colors for your spring painting.

Bacon Adds Zest To Any Meal.

Bacon added to almost any vegetable soup is an improvement. Of course the grease which it produces must be carefully removed, but the flavor remains. Dried pea and bean soup, for instance, are deliciously flavored if bacon is cooked with the peas or beans.

Any roasting meat can be flavored with slices of bacon laid over it while it is cooking. Broiled bacon with fish or with beefsteak is appetizing. A slice or two of bacon cooked with string beans or peas gives them an unusual flavor. Bacon invariably improves egg dishes. A little chopped broiled bacon can be advantageously added to any meat salad and to some of vegetables.

And, nowadays, you know many doctors recommend bacon, boiled dry without burning, for small babies that have hardly begun to eat solids. But this recommendation had better come from the doctor that knows the baby.

The way to cut bacon to advantage is to place it on a board with the rind down. Slice it with a very sharp knife down to the rind, in thin slices, but do not cut through the rind. Then run the knife along the rind, loosening the slices. The rind can be used to grease griddles with. Cut in this way the slices are even and thin.

Broiled bacon is probably the best from a dietetic point of view. And many persons think it the best from the point of taste. Bacon can be fried so that it is almost as crisp as broiled bacon in this way.

Grease an iron pan with bacon rind and heat it to the smoking point. Then put in the slices of bacon. Tip the pan at a sharp angle, so that the fat will run down, and with a fork keep the pieces of bacon from dropping into the fat. Turn them two or three times until they are crisp and dry and golden brown.

Broiled or fried in the way described, and served with eggs, bacon makes a dainty breakfast dish for spring mornings.

Cornmeal, boiled, cooled and cut into small, flat cakes, can be fried quickly a golden brown in bacon fat and served with a crisp slice of bacon on each little cake. Left-over hominy or rice or any other cereal can be used in the same way.

Bacon and cheese toast is a nourishing and tempting luncheon dish and one that is suitable also to the informal Sunday night supper. It can be prepared on the table in two chafing dishes and an electric toaster.

In a blazer or saucepan melt three tablespoonfuls of butter and stir in a tablespoonful and a half of flour. Then add three-quarters of a cupful of rich milk and stir until it thickens. In the meantime broil two slices of bacon for each person and make a slice of thin brown bread toast for each. When the cream sauce is thick and smooth add half a cupful of grated cheese and as soon as it is melted pour the mixture over the slices of toast. Put two slices of the bacon on each piece and serve immediately.

A variation on creamed macaroni is this: Boil short lengths of macaroni in cold salted water until they are tender. Drain them and mix a little butter with them to keep them from sticking together. Put them in a buttered baking dish and pour over them some thick cream sauce and season with salt and paprika. Chop some freshly boiled crisp bacon and stir it into the macaroni, sprinkle the top with fine buttered crumbs, and bake brown.

Slice the bacon and fry it, letting the fat drain down one side of the pan. Then put the slice of bacon on a little wire rack on a plate or pan in an open oven, or else put them in a wire sieve and stand them on a pan in the oven door, where they will keep warm. Cut apples in half-inch slices and fry them on each side in the bacon fat. Drain them for a moment on brown paper and then serve them with a slice or two of bacon on each piece of apple. The apples should be left on and the cores should be removed with an apple corer.

Hints To Housewives.

The best thing for cleaning tinware is common soda; dampen a cloth, dip it in soda and rub the ware briskly, after which wipe dry. Tightness of boots or shoes can be relieved by rubbing the shoes well with olive or castor oil while it is on the foot and allowing it to dry in.

An outdoor cupboard will be found useful and economical during the winter weather. It will do away with the necessity for ice for quite a long time.

When brushing a carpet sweep towards the fireplace, otherwise the draught from the chimney draws the dust in that direction, and so scatters it all over the room.

Mix stove polish with equal parts of household ammonia and turpentine and apply to the cool stove; rub off with a soft woollen cloth. It gives a high polish.

All pickles should be kept for at least one month before opening the jars for use. By opening them sooner they lose much of the delightful flavor which would otherwise be theirs.

To remove paint stains on cotton or woollen material rub with oil of turpentine and then wash with soap-suds. For old paint stains cover the marks with olive oil and then rub with commercial chloroform.

Never have linen starched if you are going to put it away for a long time. It is apt to crack and even rot. Pinse the articles quite free from starch, dry and fold up in blue paper, as this keeps them from turning yellow.

To remove perspiration stains on white dresses and underclothing first dampen the article with a little lemon juice before it is put into soap and water. Otherwise, the soap sets the stain, and very often makes it almost impossible to remove.

Furniture polish should never be applied to furniture unless it has first been washed with plain lukewarm water and dried with linen cloths. Not only is a higher polish possible but the work is lessened, and there is small chance of finger-marks.

The labor of boot cleaning may be greatly reduced by the aid of a little glycerine. First brush the boots free of dust, and then apply a small quantity of glycerine with a rag. Let them stand for ten minutes, then polish with a brush. Boots treated in this way keep their polish several days and no blacking is required.

To stop a chimney burning, close the doors and throw two or three handfuls of salt on the fire. The reason for the efficacy of this method is that salt generates muriatic acid gas, which is a prompt extinguisher of fire. If the entrance to the chimney be constantly swept round when the grate is cleaned, the danger of fire is reduced to a minimum.

The tissue paper which comes into the house around gifts or in suit boxes, if folded and put into the drawer with the dish towels, will be most useful to polish glassware of all sorts including chimneys.

To free the hands from disagreeable odors such as that of onions, cod-liver oil, etc., mix a little ground dry mustard with warm water and wash the hands well with it. The saucers of scales or vessels used in cooking can be freed from odors by the same method.

ROMANCE WAS WOVEN ROUND "MY ROSARY."

History of the Verses Which Ethelbert Nevins Made Popular—Credited to Another.

The Tangle Unravelled.

Some twenty years ago a man wrote to a woman a set of verses expressive of sorrowful and tender regret at her absence. He addressed other little poems to her, but this charming composition of three short verses, though intended for the eyes of one person alone, may truly be said to have won its way into all quarters of the globe. Millions of people have heard it sung as "The Rosary," and have read it in Mrs. Barclay's novel. They have thrilled responsive to its deep feeling, have pitied the lover, and perhaps have longed to offer him sympathy. Apart from its literary value as a true lyric of extreme beauty, other interest attaches to the poem, for such exceptional and romantic adventures have befallen it, that "My Rosary" is unique among poems.

Lost In A Restaurant.

The author, Mr. Frederick George Winter, tells how he lost his copy of it in a tiny notebook, which he inadvertently placed under the rim of a plate on a table in a restaurant in the City of London, and forgot when he left the place. His efforts to recover it or trace it after its loss was discovered proved futile, and he thought the notebook must be destroyed, or at any rate hopelessly irretrievable. Misfortune befell him in South Africa, whither he went after the South African War, and illness dogged his steps for long after his return to England, so much so that he passed years in the seclusion of invalidism, and was unaware of the existence of either the song or the novel which would have had such interest for him, until in the autumn of 1911 he first heard the words of "My Rosary" sung in a Brighton drawing-room to Ethelbert Nevins's setting. They are doubtless familiar to the reader, but it is interesting to have Mr. Winter's exact version:

"The hours I spent with thee, Sweetheart,
Are as a string of pearls to me,
I count them over, every one apart—
My rosary.
"Each one a pearl, each pearl a prayer,
To still a heart in absence wrung;
I tell each bead unto the end, and there—
A cross is hung:
"O, memories that bless—and burn!
O, barren gain and bitter loss!

I kiss each pearl, and strive at last to learn
To kiss the cross,
Dear Heart!
To kiss the cross!"

In the original of the poem which was lost in the restaurant, the word bead was used in the third as well as in the second verse, but when the author re-wrote the verses, he altered "bead" in the third verse to "pearl," a notable improvement. Another alteration made at a later time of writing was the change of "Sweetheart" to "Dear Heart" in the third verse. The points are mentioned because they indicate that it was the poem as written in the lost notebook which was appropriated and published in Mr. Roger's volume of poetry "The Wind in the Clearing," December-January, 1894-5.

But to return to the dramatic incidents in that Brighton drawing-room. Mr. Winter's amazement at hearing the words of his lyric revived and set to particularly beautiful music can be imagined. The scene would make a thrilling subject for a picture or the chapter of a romance. It was as though a withered rose stored away in the secret recesses of memory had bloomed again at the spell of music. Mr. Winter describes his feelings in the following expressive fashion:

"I began to think my senses were playing me some trick—my hair positively seemed to begin to creep upon my head. In a curiously dazed state I rose, crossed to the piano, and, stooping over the shoulder of the accompanist, endeavored to put the correctness of my hearing to the test of sight. I read the words from the printed sheet—there could no longer be the slightest doubt, I was reading the very words I had written so long ago—words which I believed to have been known to so few and probably forgotten by all save the writer himself and the addresses. Hardly knowing what I did, I returned no answer when, at the conclusion of the song, the singer turned to me and put a question; but, taking the sheet from the piano, I turned to the company present and said, 'Ladies and gentlemen, I am afraid I am going to make a statement which you will find it difficult to believe; but let me tell you that the words of this song were not written by this Robert Cameron Rogers, as stated on the front page, but by me, and a matter of twenty years ago.'"

Romantic History.

Laboriously the tangle of mystery has been to a certain extent unwound; but what became of the little notebook under the rim of the plate in the restaurant before it appeared in 1894-5 in a volume of poems by Robert Cameron Rogers, the Californian poet, it would be interesting to know. The biographical table of the poem might be written thus:

End of 1891, or beginning of 1892: Manuscript of "My Rosary" received by the lady.

1892—Verses written in a notebook with others, and lost, in a London restaurant.

Re-written in another notebook. To end of 1892 and 1893:

Probably—written in friends' autograph books.

December-January, 1893-5: Published in "The Wind in the Clearing," in the United States.

1897—Read by a lady in California in a monthly magazine, under the name "Edgar Saltus."

1901—The song, "The Rosary," published with music by Ethelbert Nevins.

1911—The song first heard by Mr. Winter.

As both Mr. Roger and Mr. Nevins are now dead, it is probable the incidents that befell the little poem across the Atlantic will never be told. If it could speak for itself what a story it would recite! Meanwhile much has been done to accumulate evidence in support of Mr. Winter's Authorship, no easy matter so long after the poem was written, and considering its eventful history. Among others, the lady who inspired the verses is alive, and has made a declaration concerning them which reads as follows: "I—do hereby solemnly and sincerely declare that about the end of the year 1892 I received in manuscript from Frederick George Winter the set of three verses entitled, 'My Rosary,' as given below; that they were sent to and received by me as the original composition of the said Frederick George Winter; that I have received other verses of a like tenor, of all of which, I believe, and have always believed, the said Frederick George Winter to be the author; and that, therefore, the claim of any other person to be the author of these verses is false."

Apart from its romantic history, a remarkable fact about "My Rosary" is its extraordinary popularity. One cannot get away from it if one would, and it is probably the best known song of the first decade of this century. It is to be hoped it will one day bring to its author, who has experienced strong vicissitudes, gold such as it has brought to others.

LADY LONDONDERRY.

Lady Londonderry, wife of the Marquess of Londonderry, who is said to have visited the soldier's camps in Ireland lately and is credited with using her influence to make the Irish officers resign, is one of the famously beautiful women of England.

Commenting on her and her husband, a London magazine said: "Yachting has been something very near a passion with her; and she herself has caught the stateliness of a tall racer. Meredith, when he would impress you with the way his heroine enters a room made her 'swim'; Lady Londonderry 'sails.' The phrase is stale; but it suits her too well to be abandoned. Famously beautiful, her features have the neatness of well-built bows; her face is clear cut as a cutter; her lines more shapely than a liner. Before the day of musical comedy and the arrival of the Maids Vale type of beauty, the photographs of Lady Londonderry filled the shop windows of Mayfair. With Lady Warwick and Mary Anderson, she was worshipped in large editions of 'cabinets' and 'midgets,' and took her place as a matter of course in the nation's albums. Since then the nation has grown frivolous.

The Marchioness of Londonderry.

Her beauty remains in the era of post-impressionism and ragtime.

One Lady Londonderry retrieved the fortunes of the family of her adoption. The present Lady Londonderry is sometimes a little sad that she has never been called upon to do the same. Her husband's affairs are desperately secure; there is the greatest possible danger that they will never be endangered. But in other ways Lady Londonderry has played her part to the full. A daughter of the late Lord Shrewsbury, she married before she was twenty, and her father's jest about "The Taming of the Shrewsbury" was like most family jests, wide of the mark. She was soon at work; a difficult period at Dublin Castle as Vicereine was followed immediately by the political life of London, with English and Irish charities into the bargain. Having taken a deep and practical interest in education matters, she received the court appointment of Senator of Queen's University of Belfast; she is a Lady of Grace of St. John and Jerusalem, a leader in Irish Industries Association, indefatigable at reading and Newmarket; and the author of "Robert Steward, Viscount Castlereagh." Her receptions, owing to the battalions of the Conservative party are overcrowded; but Lady Londonderry seems to know as by a miracle every guest. It was a trait much admired in her by a good judge, Edward VII.

UNCROWNED KINGS.

Men and Women Who are Monarchs of Small Domains.

Apart from the fact that he was the most successful chocolate manufacturer in the world, M. Henri Menier, who died recently, had another claim to distinction. He was monarch of Anticosti, an island in the mouth of the St. Lawrence, 125 miles long by 50 miles broad, which he purchased in 1896 for £25,000. M. Menier's object in purchasing the island was to transform it into the biggest private game preserve in the world. He had it stocked with all sorts of animals, and had two armed steamers to protect the island and its fisheries.

Anticosti, however, is but a small island kingdom when compared with some of those scattered around the shores of the United Kingdom which are owned and reigned over by private individuals. Lewis, in the Outer Hebrides, whose present ruler is Major Matheson, boasts of an area of 437,221 acres and a population of nearly 30,000 people. Indeed, it is the largest island in the United Kingdom next to Ireland. On its extensive moors and forest land the red deer still roam, while its magnificent lochs are unequalled for fishing.

It is in northern waters, too, that Arran is situated, an interesting island kingdom reigned over by the beautiful Marchioness of Graham, wife of the son and heir of the Duke

THE UNDERSTANDING HEART

Perhaps God Pardons so Abundantly Because He Understands the Sins of Men

"Give thy servant an understanding heart."—I. Kings, iii., 9.

Is there anything in the world which is more needed by men, in their relations with one another, than this very thing for which King Solomon prayed, namely, "an understanding heart"? Whenever there was a quarrel which was not founded at bottom upon a misunderstanding? Whenever there was a judgment passed, or a censure spoken, which was not determined by a misconception of conditions or an ignorance of motives? Whenever was reconciliation not inevitable and pardon certain when "the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth" was known? Take the most worthless denizen of the underworld, and must not every harsh word of condemnation be still and every rigorous act of punishment even be stayed if all the facts of his inheritance, environment and training are manifest? "To understand all is to pardon all," said a great moralist.

The Acts of Other Men.

That we shall ever understand in this perfect fashion is of course impossible. But it is not at all impossible that we shall recognize the limitations of our knowledge and the resulting fallibility of our conclusions, and learn to be cautious therefore in censuring the acts of other men. The very fact that we know so little about the issues of the lives of even our nearest and dearest friends, to say nothing of those more remote, should tempt us to be "slow to anger and of great mercy." And the corresponding fact that we know so much about the foibles, frailties and failings of our own lives should move us not mere to this passive charity of judgment but to an active sympathy with even the weakest and the wickedest of our fellows. We are all of us very much alike, are we not? None of us is wholly good or wholly bad, but all a general mixture of good and bad. In every one of us there is the downward tendency toward the life of physical indulgence and selfish ambition, and in every one of us also the upward tendency toward the life of devotion, self-sacrifice and love. There is no one so good but that he has his inward struggles against selfishness, deceit and lust; and no one so bad but that he has his moments of noble striving for the true, the beautiful and the good. The best of us embody the inherent possibilities of the worst, and the worst the inherent possibilities of the best. What, therefore, are even the lowest of earth's creatures doing but the very things which you and I might easily be doing if we were in their places instead of in our own? And what do they more rightly ask of us than that we shall forgive them as we ourselves would hope, and in our present estate do hope, to be forgiven?

In this sympathy with the mistakes and sins of other men, springing partly from our ignorance of their lives but infinitely more from our knowledge of our own, which leads to forgiveness; in this achievement of the imagination in putting ourselves in the offender's place, which prompts to mercy—in this do we have the essence of what is meant by the "understanding heart." It is all summed up in the famous story of John Wesley, who, seeing a criminal being led away to execution, said, "There, but for the grace of God, goes myself."—Rev. John Haynes Holmes.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

INTERNATIONAL LESSON,
APRIL 19.

Lesson III. Luke 14. Cost of Discipleship. Luke 14. 25-35. Golden Text, Matt. 16. 25.

Once more we pick up the thread of Luke's narrative of the journey. The teachings of Jesus, en route, centre largely in his emphasis upon the cost of discipleship and the serious responsibility involved in following him. His own impending suffering leads him thus to lift into prominence the serious side of the Christian life.

Verse 25. There went with him—The route taken by Jesus from Capernaum to Jerusalem was a circuitous one. See Luke 13, 22; 17, 11; 18, 31; 19, 11, 28. The journey seems to have occupied several months, ending with his triumphal entry. Here, as in other places, it is mentioned that great multitudes followed him. Some did so from idle curiosity, others with more or less interest, but with little understanding of what discipleship meant. Believing that they should know what was involved in casting their lots with him, he turned to of Montrose. Over 5,000 people inhabit the island, which is some nineteen miles long and ten and a half miles broad, with an area of 163 square miles.

The Marquis of Bute lords it over a kingdom—the Island of Bute, in the Firth of Clyde, 49 square miles in extent, and boasting of a population of 11,000 souls, while not far away is the beautiful Island of Islay, now governed by Mr. Hugh Morrison, brother-in-law of Lord Granville. This island has a length of twenty-five and a half miles, and a breadth of nineteen miles. The population, which numbers 7,000 people, are busily engaged in such industries as dairy farming, stock raising and whiskey distillation.

A few years ago Lord Strathcona purchased from the heirs of Sir John McNeill, the Island of Colonsay, which is eight miles long and from one and a half to three miles in width, while the Island of Rum, or Rhum, is reigned over by Sir John Bullough. On the latter island are some of the finest herds, and it provides some of the best shooting in Scotland. The place, indeed, abounds with every variety of game, which is zealously guarded by its owner.

In the Outer Hebrides is another island kingdom, the Island of North Uist, belonging to Sir Arthur J. Campbell-Orde, who served with great distinction in the South African War. It has an area of 76,000 acres and a population of nearly 4,000. No one can land or reside upon the island without the owner's permission, while it is also free from taxation—or, rather, no rates or taxes can be levied without the consent of the ruler.

them and delivered the discourse contained in our lesson.

26. If any man . . . hateth not his own—Jesus here refers to cases in which a choice must be made between love of kindred and loyalty to Christ (compare Matt. 6, 24; 10, 37). Jesus often thus stated a principle in a startling way.

27. Whosoever doth not bear his own cross—Bearing the cross is mentioned only twice in the New Testament; here, where it is used figuratively, and in John 19, 17, where it is used literally. Jesus meant that the disciple must be willing to suffer martyrdom if necessary. Putting to death by crucifixion was so common in Christ's time that his hearers had no doubt often seen men "carrying the cross."

By two illustrations Jesus points out that becoming a disciple is a serious matter not to be entered into thoughtlessly or without considering the probable outcome.

28. Desiring to build a tower—An estimate of the building material is equally essential in character-building. It is first of all a question of what a person can put into the service of Christ.

31. King—Local princes, though subject to the Roman empire, bore the title of kings.

Whether he is able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand—This was an age of reckless warfare. A king with a smaller force might possibly win a battle, but the case manifestly calls for careful deliberation. In the Christian life, power of endurance is as important as the building material.

33. Renounceth not all that he hath—Through all the history of the Christian church there have been those who have been called upon to actually renounce all their possessions for the sake of the gospel. All Christians are asked to be ready to do so, that is, to subordinate earthly claims to those of Christ when the two are incompatible.

34. Salt—Discipleship, or the spirit of self-sacrifice and service, referred to in the preceding verses. Salt which has lost its savor is here the discipleship which has lost the spirit of self-sacrifice and service for Christ's sake.

35. Cast it out—Tasteless salt would be absolutely worthless. Disciples without the spirit of self-denial and service cannot exert a helpful influence in human society.

When making molds it is well to remember that the starchy foods they contain must be thoroughly cooked. Some cooks consider cornstarch is done the moment it thickens. This is not the case. You should always cook cornstarch at least five minutes after it thickens.

A good recipe to follow in whipping cream is the following: Mix one quart of heavy cream and one cupful of milk. Beat until stiff, using an egg-beater. Add one-half cupful of powdered sugar, a few grains of salt and two teaspoonfuls of vanilla.

GIRL HEADS EXPLORATION.

Oxford Graduate Will Command Expedition Into Siberia.

Miss Mary Czaplicka, a Polish girl, and a native of Warsaw, Russia, is about to set out in charge of a scientific expedition to Siberia, sent thither by the University of Oxford. Her companions are English.

"I spent several years in the depths of Russia, where I was obliged to earn my living by giving Polish lessons in the houses of Polish immigrants during the revolution," the young woman said when asked why she was made chief of the party. "I have always taken a deep interest in anthropology and managed to find out some interesting details about the native Siberian tribes which I set before the authorities at Oxford when I was able to go there to study."

"The human anatomy department of Oxford University was so pleased with my report last year that it offered to send me in charge of an expedition to inquire into the origin of native Siberian tribes, of which very little is known."

Miss Czaplicka was educated in Warsaw and at Somerville College, Oxford. She was the first Polish student to be received at Oxford on the strength of English scholarships.

Policewomen in Pittsburgh will receive $75 a month.

A teacher was trying to find from a tiny child the name of his father. He seemed quite unable to think of it, so to help him she asked, "What do you call him?" "I call him father," was the reply. BABY'S OWN TABLETS USED FOR YEARS

When a mother uses only one medicine as long as there are little ones in the home it certainly bears grand testimony to the value of that particular remedy. Thousands of mothers use nothing else but Baby's Own Tablets. Concerning them Mrs. M. All my neighbors who have used them think as I do." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 35 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

NO LOVE MAKING BEFORE 21.

Curious Custom Is Enforced In Italian Village.

There is a village in Italy, Alezio, near Belluno, where young men are not allowed to make love before they have served their time in the army. This custom dates from time immemorial, and it is based on the experience that young men often forget the girls they promise to marry before they go soldiering.

Lovemaking at Alezio is consequently only allowed to men over 21, who are expected to enforce the custom and see that the rule is not broken. A young man of 19 who was caught making love to a girl in a secluded street of the village was mobbed recently, and as he showed fight, despite the fact that practically all the villagers turned out to throw stones at the young couple, he was shot at close range and mortally wounded. Although the crime was committed in the presence of 300 people not one person could be persuaded to give information to the police, so that the man who enforced the village custom will probably go free.

A clerical gentleman was walking along the main street of a Scottish town, where he had once been a minister, and on meeting one of his old parishioners paused to speak with her. "How are you, Mrs. Jones?" said he kindly. "Verra weel, sir," replied the woman plaintively. "And how is your husband?" "My man, sir, is in Heaven, sir, this two year." "I am very sorry to hear it," responded the clergyman absently, as he passed on, leaving the poor woman dumb with astonishment.

South Waterville, York Co., N. B., April 6.—(Special).—Mrs. Wellington Dunlop, an estimable resident of this place, has given an interview in which she states that she believes Dodd's Kidney Pills to be the best of all medicines. Mrs. Dunlop says:

"When I commenced taking Dodd's Kidney Pills I was in a terrible condition. I had been sick for over a year and had paid out more than one hundred and thirty dollars for doctors and medicine. I would get some better and then get just as bad as ever."

"The doctor said my trouble came from my stomach. His medicine relieved me for only a few minutes after I had taken it, and I got so that I was nearly insane."

"I had not taken Dodd's Kidney Pills two days till I was some better. I took twelve boxes in all, and I can truly say they have done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are suffering woman's best friend. If you haven't tried them yourself, ask your neighbors.

WOOD BLOCKS BEST ROAD.

Is Used In All English Cities—Also In Europe.

It has been stated that creosoted wood blocks would make the ideal pavement if the following faults could be eliminated: (1) The tendency to expand, resulting in the pavement, discoloration of curbs, and sometimes upheaval of the pavement; (2) slipperiness; (3) bleeding of oil. Of all the wood pavements that I saw in London, Paris, Berlin and other places, none exhibited any of the foregoing defects with the exception of two or three slight bulges noticed in London, writes an expert in the Engineering News.

Creosoted wood is the most highly esteemed paving material in the English cities. In ten of the twenty-eight boroughs constituting the city of London, and comprising the most thickly populated section of the city, the total mileage of creosoted wood block in 1910 was 121. Liverpool has about 150,000 square yards; Birkenhead, 95,000 square yards. In fact, all English cities of over 50,000 population have wood paved streets, and in most cases these are the principal thoroughfares.

There is not much wood-block paving in Berlin, but a condition which seems rather remarkable exists in that on streets paved with asphalt, wood-block paving is used where the grade becomes too steep and the asphalt will prove unduly slippery. Most of the approaches to bridges are paved with creosoted wood-block. This city has probably the finest sheet asphalt paving in the world. The wood paving is rough and comparatively noisy.

Creosoted wood-block paving in Paris is more noticeable for quantity than it is for quality. The report of the Chief Engineer of Bridges and Streets of Paris, at the London Road Congress, stated that the average life of the hardwood paving was six years.

"After suffering so long from a bad case of catarrhal deafness, it is no wonder that I am tickled to death at the miracle Catharhazone performed for me, writes T. Y. Weightman, from Bridgetown. 'I had dreadful noises, a continual buzzing in my ears, my trouble was due to catarrh of the head and ears, and it also affected my throat, which was irritable and sore. Catharhazone seemed to reach to the very bottom of the trouble. It cleared up my throat weakness, rid me of catarrh and as a result my hearing returned. Now at my age of seventy-five I can hear like a child, and I am thankful to Collins' Drug Store for having recommended Catharhazone to me.'

"Ah, poor man," said a kind-hearted old lady visiting a convict prison to one of the "boarders." "I suppose you'll be very thankful when the time comes for you to leave this dreadful place?" "No, I shan't," retorted the convict surlily. "What! Don't you want to be at liberty again?" exclaimed the good dame in surprise. "No," returned the man. "Don't want no bloomin' liberty! I'd a bloomin' sight rather stop 'ere!" "How strange," said the visitor as she turned away. "I had no idea the prisoners were so contented. What was the poor man's offence?" she continued. "E were a bit absent-minded, marm," replied the ward-maid with a grin. "Absent-minded," exclaimed the official. "E kept forgettin' as 'ow 'e were a married man. Electricity Used on Milk.

On the principle that "prevention is better than cure," the Liverpool Corporation is now sterilizing by electricity the whole of the infants' milk supplied to the public from the various corporation milk depots in that city. All tubercular and mammalian contamination is said to be completely annihilated, and also any danger from zymotic disease in the fecation thereby prevented. The taste and chemistry of the milk, it is said, remain unaltered by this form of sterilizing.

Out of Work.

Mrs. Subbubs (to tramp)—"Out of work, are you! Then you're just in time. I've a cord of wood to be cut up, and I was just going to send for a man to do it." Tramp—"That so, mum? Where does he live? I'll go and get him."

A bite of this and a taste of that, all day long, dulls the appetite and weakens the digestion.

NEW ANESTHETIC FOUND.

Urethane Said to Be Less Harmful than Ether.

Interesting experiments with a new anesthetic have been conducted at the Cambridge laboratory.

The substance, which is called Urethane, is a combination of urea and alcohol. It is administered hypodermically, and drowsiness soon becomes a very deep unconsciousness, and insensibility to pain is complete. There is perfect security when it is used in any operation. The advantage claimed for the new anesthetic is that heart failure never occurs when it is properly used, while a majority of the deaths from chloroform are due to heart failure. When the breathing stops, as it frequently does, during the administration of an inhaled anesthetic, it can usually be started again by artificial respiration, provided always that the heart is still beating. The assurance, therefore, that in cases of an overdose of this anesthetic the breathing would be affected before the heart will be of immense comfort to surgeons and anesthetists.

Another advantage is that the choking sensation experienced with ether and chloroform is not present. Moreover, after urethane there is no sickness, and thus the danger of stitches giving way and ligatures slipping off during retching is avoided. A disadvantage is that experimenters have not yet been able to reduce the period of insensibility below six hours. All the operations up to the present have been made on animals.

Painful Swellings Reduced

Muscular Strains Ended

SUCH TROUBLES NOW QUICKLY RUBBED AWAY BY POWER-FUL REMEDY.

If you have any muscles that are strained and weak, that are frequently subject to rheumatic pains; if you have any painful swellings that refuse to go away—get busy with Nerviline. This is the very sort of trouble that Nerviline is noted for curing quickly. "I have proved Nerviline simply a wonder in reducing a hard, painful swelling. It followed an injury I received in my left leg and caused me great pain and discomfort. The muscles were strained and sore, and no other remedy gave the ease and comfort I got from rubbing on Nerviline. There it was, a soothing, pain-relieving power about Nerviline that touched the root of my trouble. Nerviline reduced the swelling, it destroyed the pain, it brought my limb back to perfect condition." The experience of Mr. Bowen, whose home is in Middlesex, is not unusual. Thousands are proving every day that muscular pains of every kind, chronic rheumatism, lumbago, neuralgia and sciatica will yield to Nerviline when nothing else can possibly cure. Nerviline is an old-time family pain remedy, used nearly forty years with great success. The large family size bottle costs 50c., trial size 25c. at all dealers.

COURT LIST MADE BY QUEEN.

Only Few of Those Presented Are Invited to Functions.

Presentation at court is, of course, a desirable thing, but the stories printed in the London gossip papers about the privileges it confers—such as at least one royal invitation in the year for the state ball—do not in fact accompany it. The ordinary presentation at court has no further results than the appearance of the names of the presented in the following morning's papers. Without having been presented, however, no one can be invited to meet royalty. The names of all presented people are inscribed at the Lord Chamberlain's office, and from this book the formal list of state invitations are compiled, all whose names are recorded. That for a state ball, for instance, is confined to those connected even remotely with the court. It is of course submitted for royal approval, and by the King's wish the Queen now gives the final decision as to the invitations.

The list is returned to the Lord Chamberlain's office, and thence invitations are sent out.

The Ladies' Aid

The old church bell had long been cracked. Its call was but a groan. It seemed to sound a funeral knell. With every broken tone. "We need a bell," the brethren said. "But taxes must be paid; We have no money we can spare—Just ask the Ladies' Aid." The shingles on the roof were old. The rain came down in rills. The brethren slowly shook their heads. And spoke of "monthly bills." The chairman of the board arose, And said, "I am afraid That we shall have to lay the case Before the Ladies' Aid." The carpet had been patched and patched. Till quite beyond repair: And through the aisles and on the steps. The boards showed hard and bare. "It is too bad!" the brethren said. "An effort must be made To raise an interest on the part Of members of the Aid." The preacher's stipend was behind: The poor man blushed to meet The grocer and the butcher as They passed him on the street. But nobly spoke the brethren then: "Pastor, you shall be paid! We'll call upon the treasurer Of our good Ladies' Aid." "Ah!" said the men, the way to heaven Is long and hard and steep: With slopes of ease on either side, The path 'tis hard to keep. We cannot climb the heights alone: Our hearts are sore dismayed; We never shall get to heaven at all Without the Ladies' Aid." —W. V. BURN.

Sugar-making is the order of the day. Mr. A. Hamm, of St. Olaf, returned home after spending Sunday with his parents of this place. Little Alice Hamm, youngest daughter of Mr. T. A. Hamm, accompanied her uncle Alfred to St. Olaf for a visit. Quite a number from here are taking advantage of the Easter holidays. Miss B. Kennedy has gone to her home in Stirling to spend Easter. Miss Mary Cole has gone to spend the summer in Sidney. Miss Kennedy and Mr. C. Baragar, Jr., were the guests of Mr. E. Coles last Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Hamm and little Harry have gone to St. Olaf for Easter.

Malone

Miss Lizzie Lough, who has been attending Albert College, Belleville, has returned to her home here. Miss Ruth Bell, of Stirling High school, is spending the holidays at her home here. Miss Alice Nickle, teacher at Glen Alda, is spending the holidays with her parents. Miss Della Empey is spending her holidays at Eldorado under the parental roof. Miss Myrtle Downey, of Toronto, spent a few days here the guest of her aunt, Mrs. John D. Nickle. Optimism is fast giving place to pessimism in the minds of the numerous depositors in Dale's bank. So great was the confidence placed in the integrity of this financial institution that neither young nor old believed it possible that that which has happened could ever happen. And once again our old teacher, Experience, has brought home to us the truth of her oft taught and true lesson. "Security is mortal's chiefest enemy."

Temper a Danger to Heart

To keep your temper is rather a good thing, says Dr. Strickland Goodall. Every time the heart contracts, he says, its force would raise a weight of two ounces to the height of one foot and it does this from 70 to 140 times every minute. "Running to catch a train increases the heart's work by 228 foot pounds a minute; ascending a staircase slowly increases the heart's work by 112 foot pounds and ascending quickly by 152 foot pounds. A man who is really angry increases the work of his heart by 72 foot pounds. A rest of half an hour daily would save in a year 210,000 foot pounds of work on the heart."

Value of Rheuma From the Court

Judge Barhorst was Relieved of Rheumatism After Doctors Failed

If you have tried many other remedies and doctors' treatments for rheumatism and found they failed, do not be skeptical about trying Rheuma. Read the testimony of Judge John Barhorst, of Port Lorne, O.: "After treatment by three doctors without result, I have been cured of a very bad case of rheumatism by using two bottles of Rheuma. It is now two years since I used the remedy and I am still as well as ever. Previously, I was a cripple, walking on crutches." Such testimony should be convincing. 50 cts. of T. G. JAPALAC

Made by The Glidden Varnish Co., Limited, Toronto

The economical decoration of your home is largely a matter of knowing the right finishes to use.

For the exterior of your home there is no better paint than Sherwin-Williams Paint (Prepared) SWP. It is made of the purest of materials, combined in correct scientific proportions with the aid of special machinery. The result is a far spreading, long wearing paint in liquid form, all ready to apply.

For floors, the easiest finish to apply is S-W Interior Floor Paint, and this gives particularly good results even on old worn or discolored floors. On a good hardwood floor the best finish is S-W Mar-not, a hard-drying waterproof floor varnish.

For the walls of your home, while water paints, such as S-W Decotint, give pleasing effects, they have not the durability which means true economy, Sherwin-Williams Flat-tone is unquestionably the best paint for walls. It is an oil paint that dries with a soft, flat, velvety finish. It is very durable and can be washed with soap and water. S-W Flat-tone comes in twenty-four beautiful colors, the selection of expert decorators.

For the varnishing of interior work such as wainscoting, doors, furniture, etc., we recommend S-W Excellor Varnish, or S-W Kopal, an old fashioned, general purpose varnish, which can be used inside and outside and is just the thing for varnished woodwork in kitchens, bathrooms, or for front doors, porch ceilings, etc. For floors use S-W Mar-not, a special waterproof floor varnish, will not turn white when water is spilled on it, nor does it show scratches and heel marks readily.

We can take care of your every paint and varnish need. Drop in and discuss your paint and varnish problems with us.

Forestry Convention in Halifax

Ottawa, Ont., Apr. 11.—Mr. William Power, M. P. the newly elected President of the Canadian Forestry Association, presided at a meeting of directors in Ottawa, when upon the invitation of the Government and lumbermen of Nova Scotia, it was decided to hold the next Canadian Forestry Convention in Halifax on September 2, 3 and 4. Mr. F. C. Whitman, the Vice-President of the Association, who has for many years been forwarding the cause of forest conservation in Nova Scotia, was present and said that matters were ripe for a most useful and successful convention to deal with Nova Scotia's forest problems. A number of men prominently connected with forest matters have already signified their intention of taking part.

Mr. James Lawler, of Ottawa, Sec. of the Canadian Forestry Association, will go to Nova Scotia early in the summer to hold a series of local meetings of timber land owners in different parts of the province preparatory to the big convention.

Charges Against An Attempt Department of Education

Almonte, April 20.—Mr. R. S. Jenkins, the Principal of the Almonte High school, whose place his wife must take this term owing to the extraordinary action of the Education Department in suspending his certificate without valid cause, has issued the following statement containing a list of charges such as have rarely had to be brought against a department of the public service in an Anglo-Saxon country.

"I charge the Department of Education for Ontario with arbitrarily and wrongfully suspending my certificate as a teacher under terms which were intended to be equivalent to cancellation, without having given me an opportunity to make a defence.

"I charge it with fabricating regulations which have no existence in fact.

"I charge it with making a series of absurd or false statements of which it refuses to give proof, because it is aware it is unable to do so.

"I charge it with using in a communication such terms as will cast lasting disgrace upon the department unless they are apologized for and withdrawn.

"I charge it with dishonestly appropriating, retaining and making public a private letter, the nature of which it has attempted to distort.

"I charge John Seath, Superintendent of Education, with being the person who has designed and carried out this plan for driving me from the teaching profession of the Province."

Remarkable Old Family Bible

W. C. Mikel, K.C., of Belleville, former President of the Ontario Bar Association, owns what is probably the oldest Bible in Ontario. It was published in A.D. 1700. That is a long time ago, and the world has seen many changes down through those two hundred and fourteen years. At the time it came into existence there was no United States of America, and George Washington had not been born, nor had the great Napoleon appeared on the scene.

The Bible has been in the Mikel family since 1754, one hundred and sixty years ago, and six generations of the one family have thumbed and gazed upon the book. It is five inches thick from cover to cover, fourteen inches long and nine inches wide. The binding consists of wood covered with leather. It contains one hundred and twenty-three illustrations about six inches square with a large portrait engraved the full size of the book on the second page. Judging from the expense attached to publishing at the time this volume was published it must have cost a considerable sum but its value is now no doubt, many times its original cost.

A few years after the close of the American independence, young Godlove Mikel, who had fought on the side of the British, decided to come to Canada and his mother gave him the Bible. It was somewhat big and clumsy to carry around but he and his family stuck to it pretty well through all the vicissitudes from early pioneer life down to the present time.

It is something to trace descent back to a man who started life with a big Bible and a name like Godlove. It says something for the parents who gave him the start.

We understand Mr. Mikel would be glad to hear from any persons possessing old Bibles with descriptions of same.

The friends and neighbors in this vicinity gathered at the home of Mr. W. J. Wiggins on Saturday evening, April 11th, to bid them farewell ere they depart from our midst. The following address was read by Miss B. Cox:

To Mr. and Mrs. Wiggins and Miss Maggie:

DEAR FRIENDS,—We, your friends and neighbors, have met with you here tonight to bid you farewell ere your departure for a far distant part of our fair Dominion. Words fail to express the keen regret we all experience in thus severing the friendly ties of many years. It is our most sincere wish and prayer that you may experience the same prosperity and happiness in your new home that you have enjoyed during your half a lifetime of sojourn among us. You will be very greatly missed in our community and in the church, and your invaluable services to the choir cannot easily be replaced.

As a slight token of our esteem we beg that you will accept these—Mr. Wiggins, this club bag, Mrs. Wiggins, this brooch, and Maggie this wash bag.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors.

An attempt at robbery was made at Belleville last Friday evening, but was frustrated by the timely appearance of Jas. Beatty on the scene. It appears that Will Paffs, Will Cassidy and Andy Reid were coming from Marmora when they overtook a stranger and invited him to get in the rig with them and he refused. He being an elderly man they put him in by force. When the party arrived at Belleville hotel they drove under the shed and demanded his money. When he did not give it to them they proceeded to take it by force. Will Paffs held the horse while the other two went through the victim's pockets. In the tussle that followed the stranger received some ugly blows in the face. Just then Mr. Beatty, proprietor of the hotel, heard some unusual noise under the shed, and it being dark at the time went out to investigate. Just in time to prevent the robbery. As it was they got no money. No arrests have yet been made. It is said that Cassidy and Reid disappeared.

Lacrosse

The Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association annual convention, held in Toronto on Good Friday, ably demonstrated that Canada's great national game is booming, and that the season of 1914 will be one of the biggest in the history of Ontario. Over 200 delegates were in session all day and every man was filled with unlimited enthusiasm. The representatives from this district were particularly prominent in the proceedings, and succeeded in electing T. P. Lancaster manager of the Lacrosse club as the representative of Central Eastern Ontario on the council. Mr. Lancaster was the third highest on the list of those elected for the Council, receiving 87 votes despite the fact that W. H. Roe of Campbellford was also a nominee with 47 votes. His credit undoubtedly received the support that would have put the former at the head of the poll. Besides electing their officers for the year the delegates passed an amendment to the constitution that will greatly benefit the towns in this section in cutting the intermediate junior and juvenile playing strength from twelve men to ten. This will mean that the smaller towns, who have had trouble in former years in gathering a full team together will be on easy street now as it is much easier to get ten men out than twelve.

The O.A.L.A. executive will meet in the course of a week or so and draw up the rules and regulations and fix the district groups for the playing season.

Tweed, Campbellford, Hastings, Peterboro, Marmora and Havelock were represented at the convention while Madoc, Stirling and Norwood will undoubtedly have teams in the field.

Campbellford will have an eight-team school series of its own this year and E. J. Smith of that town has donated a $25 silver cup to be competed for from year to year.

First Battle Between U. S. and Mexico

Owing to an insult to the American flag and the continued refusal of Huerta, the provisional governor of Mexico, to atone for the insult by flying the United States flag, President Wilson ordered United States marines to invade Mexico and seize Vera Cruz. This act has led to an engagement between the marines and the Mexican forces under General Maas, in which 4 Americans are reported to be killed and 21 wounded. The same dispatch reports that more than 200 Mexicans were killed.

New History for High Schools

The Minister of Education has awarded the publishing of the High School History of Canada to the T. Eaton Company, Limited, the price of each copy of the book to be 10 cents. There were five tenders, of which the T. Eaton Co.'s was the lowest.

The new history is by W. L. Grant, M.A., Professor of History in Queen's University, and is pronounced by those who have seen it to be an extremely well-written and interesting book, suitable as a textbook for schools and as a work for general reading. It is illustrated, and consists of about 130 pages.

Good Friday Added to "Dry" Days

Although meagre in its concessions the Government's licence legislation this session tends to place further restrictions upon the liquor traffic. The bill which was introduced into the Legislature by Hon. W. J. Hanna Monday afternoon last contains no sensational provisions. It consists of only six sections.

The first change is to include Good Friday along with Christmas as one of the days on which liquor cannot be sold.

The second clause deals with the right of appeal from convictions for the illegal sale of liquor. Heretofore a licensee only had the right of appeal from the conviction, but the law is to be amended to include druggists as the druggists' association thought that this provision was only fair. The amendment makes it clear that a druggist has the right of appeal. In all other cases the law provides that the only appeal lies to the High Court under a writ of Certiorari.

One of the important changes is that giving a Magistrate power to put any person on the Indian list who sells liquor to or procures it for anybody already on the list. Experience has shown that many persons who are on the prohibited list are supplied liquor by friends who enjoy with them the convivial liquor. A short term in jail has not proved a deterrent to this practice, and it is thought that if their own supply is endangered these people will not be so likely to offer their good services.

In view of the growth of local option the law with respect to the fines being kept separate for each municipality is to be changed. Hereafter these fines are to be kept in one fund for each district, and the expense of enforcing the law in that district can be paid out of it. This will do away with the nuisance of keeping a number of small accounts where one would serve the much better.

Another change will affect the provision requiring a person found under the influence of liquor in a local option district to tell from whom he secured under a penalty of $50 fine for refusing. The change will embrace all places where no tavern or shop licences are issued and the person who is found under the influence of liquor in these places will be subject to the same penalties as if it were a local option district. The last section is designed to strengthen the hands of the department in enforcing the law in counties or districts where the Canada temperance act is in operation.

The house will appreciate said Mr. Hanna, that we are confined to fairly narrow limits when it comes to that and with respect to these limits such as they are, we have sought to make such changes as will strengthen the hands of the department in that particular.

In countries the law is to be enlarged so that the province may provide out of the consolidated revenue fund one-half of the amount required to enforce the law over and above what is available out of the fines received from penalties imposed. Under the legislation of Sir Oliver Mowat the Province has been paying only one-third of the deficiency.

In unorganized districts the entire cost of enforcing the Canada temperance act is to be borne by the Province and for this purpose $5,000 has been put in the estimates. This will affect the district of Manitoulin where the Scott act will come into force on the first of next month.

Fewer Students As Fire Rangers

All fire rangers must be ready to take up their duties by May first, not a day later. This regulation is not a new one, but this year it must be observed. In the past the majority of fire rangers have been composed of students from Toronto University. They were recruited from all faculties, chiefly from Arts, Medicine and Science. Examinations in Arts and Medicine last well into May, and as a consequence many rangers have been from two to three weeks late in taking up their duties. With the enforcement of the regulation, most of the students will be automatically cut off, and only a few Science men will be able to spend their summer in the bush.

In former years the Government was unable to enforce the regulation with regard to the first of May because of their inability to secure rangers. Conditions, however, have changed. The lumber companies are not doing anything like the amount of work in the summer that they did in the past and as a result many experienced woodmen are available to take up their duties. These men are accustomed to the duties connected with the work, having spent practically all their lives in the bush.

The Government will appoint about 1,100 men altogether for fire ranging duties this season a number of them have already taken up their duties. Of the 1,100 the government pays the expenses of 534, the men employed on Crown lands. Of the remainder a large majority are employed by the lumber companies at their own expense. Then there are the men who are employed along the lines of railways. In their case the government pays half the expenses and the railroads the other half.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

We hear altogether too much these days, complains a British observer, about what the worst men are doing and too little about what the best men are thinking. The morbid, the pessimistic phases of life are forever in the limelight, he says. But little is the attention given to the men thinking helpful, constructive thoughts and to the movements doing helpful constructive work.

There is much truth in this, and it is applicable to other countries no less than to England. In recent years, for example, we have been fed on all sorts of truthfully sensational reports and documents showing the growth of poverty among industrial classes in every country. Side by side with this work of investigating poverty and laying the facts regarding it before the public have gone, however, vitally important constructive efforts to check this growth of destitution among laboring people. The governments of nearly all European countries have been relieving industrial distress by ever-broadening schemes of social insurance. Yet little, indeed, is the knowledge which the public possesses concerning this world-wide anti-poverty campaign.

The extent to which the governments of the world are arming, so to speak, against poverty is shown by I. M. Rubinow in his recently published work entitled "Social Insurance." Since 1880, says Mr. Rubinow, the nations of Europe have been extending the functions of insurance until to-day, in some countries at least, wage earners enjoy a remarkable measure of protection against want and distress arising from many causes. Germany was the first country to adopt the weapons of social insurance against poverty. But the movement, while fathered in Germany, is now, according to Mr. Rubinow, "one of the most important world movements of our times." Social insurance, he says, is to-day fighting poverty not only throughout Europe but in Africa and Australia.

The scope and horizon of social insurance is summarized by Mr. Rubinow as follows: "Accident compensation or accident insurance has been established practically throughout Europe and in many British colonies; compulsory sickness insurance has been introduced in about one-half of the largest countries of Europe—namely: Germany, Austria-Hungary, Norway, Great Britain, Serbia, and Russia, and voluntary subsidized sickness insurance in France, Belgium, Denmark, Sweden, and Switzerland; compulsory old age insurance exists in Germany, Luxembourg, and France, and old age pensions in Denmark, Iceland, Great Britain, France, Australia, and New Zealand, and voluntary subsidized state systems of old age insurance in Italy, Belgium, Serbia, and Spain; unemployment insurance by means of subsidies to workmen's voluntary organizations is rapidly spreading in large European cities, exists by national law in Norway and Denmark, and the first compulsory unemployment insurance system has been established in Great Britain; the beginnings of a national system of widows' and orphans' pensions have been made in Germany."

It is great progress the world is making toward checking, if not totally suppressing, poverty by means of social insurance.

King's Band Very Old.

The King's Band, which a facetious contemporary recently erroneously announced had been "disbanded," has been a part of the Royal Household for centuries. It consists of a "Secretary and Orchestral Librarian," a "Leader of the Music," 23 "Musicians," of whom one is a lady, and 16 "Household Drummers." These particulars are taken from a recently published "Imperial Calendar," which, on the old principle that all who serve the King shall share in the reflected "glory of his regality," gives the name of every member of the Sovereign's household from the Lord Chamberlain and Lord High Steward down to the lowest kitchen-maid, coal porter, or pot-boiler. No one is left out.—London Chronicle.

Dainty Dishes.

Rhubarb Pudding.—Mix together two cups of flour, four teaspoons of baking powder, one-half cup of sugar and one-half teaspoon of salt. Beat an egg light; add two tablespoons of melted butter and three-fourths cup milk. Combine the two mixtures and beat well. In a baking dish have two cups of rhubarb cut in small pieces and one cup of sugar and one-fourth teaspoon of cinnamon. Spread the flour mixture over the rhubarb and bake half an hour in a moderately hot oven or steam one hour. Serve with the following sauce:—Beat together one egg and one cup of sugar until light and creamy; and one-half cup of hot milk; flavor with one-half teaspoon of lemon extract.

Rhubarb and Orange Jam.—One quart of rhubarb cut in small pieces, six oranges, three cups of sugar. Remove the rind from the oranges and scrape off the white pith; with a pair of scissors cut the rind into thin strips. Remove the seeds and fibrous parts from the oranges and put into a preserve kettle with the rhubarb, sugar and rinds. Bring to the boiling point and skim. Cook until the jam stiffens when tested on a cold saucer. Pour into sterilized jars; cover with paraffin and set away to cool and then cover.

Norwegian Rarebit.—One small box of oiled sardines, one-fourth cup of cheese broken in small bits, yolk of one egg, one-half cup of strained tomato, one-half teaspoon of salt, a few drops of tabasco sauce. Cut slices of bread one-third inch thick, remove the crusts, cut in strips one and one-half inches wide by three inches long. Toast on one side. Place two sardines on the toasted side of each strip of bread and put them where they will keep hot. Heat the oil drained from the fish, add the seasonings, tomato and the egg yolk slightly beaten. Cook over hot water until it thickens, then pour it over the sardines. Serve at once.

Finnan Haddie Rarebit.—Broil the fish; pour boiling water over it and let it stand on the stove where it will not boil for ten minutes. Drain off the water and remove the bones and skin. Flake into small pieces with a fork and add to it the following sauce: One tablespoon of butter and one tablespoon of flour blended together; add one cup of milk and cook five minutes. Add a few drops of tabasco sauce and three-fourths cup of grated cheese. Serve on slices of toast.

Japanese Eggs.—Three hard-boiled eggs, three sardines, one-half teaspoon of salt, one tablespoon of butter, a few grains of cayenne, one and one-half cups of hot boiled rice, one cup of tomato sauce. Cook three eggs one-half hour just below the boiling point. Remove from the water and drop into cold water; let them remain two or three minutes and then remove the shell. Cut the eggs lengthwise and take out the yolks. Remove the bones from the sardines and mince fine, mix with the egg yolks and add butter and seasoning. Form into balls and put one ball in each half of egg white. Spread the rice on a platter and place the eggs on it. Pour the tomato sauce around the eggs.

Pickled Salmon.—Boil two pounds of salmon. Remove the bones and skin. Boil together one cup of vinegar, one cup of water that the fish was boiled in, one dozen peppercorns, eight whole allspice, one teaspoon of salt and two bay leaves. Boil ten minutes, then pour over the fish. In twelve hours it will be ready to serve. It is good to serve either as a relish for lunch or as a salad.

Fishcakes From Canned Salmon.—One can of salmon, one pint of mashed potato, one egg, two tablespoons of milk; drain the salmon and remove the skin and bones; mash with a fork. If cold mashed potato is used, heat it over the fire with the milk. Add the fish to the potato and stir over hot water until thoroughly mixed; if too dry add a little extra milk. Season to taste. Remove from the fire and add the egg, beaten light, and the butter. Form in shape in a mixing spoon and fry in deep fat. Drain on soft paper.

Baked Halibut.—A thick piece of halibut weighing about two pounds, one-fourth pound of fat salt pork, one medium-sized onion, one-half teaspoon of salt, three-fourths cup of cracker crumbs, three tablespoons of butter and one-fourth teaspoon of paprika. Cut the pork in thin slices and place one-half of it in a shallow baking tin; remove the black skin of the fish by dipping in boiling water and then scrape it off with a knife. Cut the onion in thin slices and lay it on the pork, then lay the fish on it. Put the remainder of the pork on the fish and dredge well with flour. Bake in a moderately hot oven one-half hour. Melt the butter, stir the crumbs into it, add the salt and paprika; spread this over the fish and bake fifteen minutes. Remove to a hot plate and garnish with slices of lemon cut in fancy shapes and chopped parsley.

The young Princess Catherine of Greece, the sixth child of Queen Sophia, the sister to the German Kaiser, was born, while her father, the King of Greece, was at the front during the Balkan War. While on the battlefield, he was apprised of the birth of the Princess, and vowed that every soldier of the Empire would be the godfather to his newly-born daughter. As the fighting strength of the Grecian army at that time was 150,000 men, and as there were on the reserve list another 200,000 men, the charming young princess can boast of being the only living infant who has 350,000 godfathers. SHOULD JESUS COME BACK

Impossible to Tell What We Would do or Say if He Were With Us at This Hour

I will come again.—John xiv., 3.

There is probably no speculation which has been more popular in all periods of Christian history than that as to what Jesus would do if He should return to the earth and live again among men. In the Middle Ages this took the form of certain legends as to actual reappearances, of which the narrative of St. Christopher at the ferry is a familiar and supreme example. In our time we have not so much stories as serious discussions of just what kind of life Jesus would live, just where He would place Himself amid the infinite complexities of modern existence and just what causes He would espouse for the betterment of society in the event of a second coming. And if anything is more amazing than the surety with which people give answers to these questions it is the conflicts which are involved in these answers. The uncertainty of the record, the remoteness of time and place, the richness and variety of Jesus's teaching, the many-sidedness of His character, the wideness of His sympathies and the indiscriminateness of His personal associations—all these facts unite to make it possible for almost any assertion about the Nazarene to find substantiation. With the result that

The Priest and the Prophet, the conservative and the radical, the individualist and the socialist, the non-resident and the direct actionist, the champion of law and order and the sponsor of anarchistic violence, all find in Him a forerunner, and declare that He would join with them should He return!

That such assertions as these are at the best doubtful is manifest to anybody who really understands the nature of the problem involved. Jesus was the last person in the world to be tagged or typed or poured into a mould. And what circumstance of His day has been preserved to our own, so unchanged in character as to enable us to draw any analogy or make any prophecy? To argue that the carpenter of the Palestine of 30 A.D. would in the world of 1914 A.D. hate capitalists, or support trade unions, or espouse the economic doctrines of socialism, or urge the Church to avoid political and industrial entanglements, or countenance almsgiving, or oppose divorce, is as ridiculous as to argue that He would not do any one of these things.

Amid all uncertainties, however, one thing at least is sure. We know the spirit in which Jesus would live to-day, just as we know the spirit in which He lived yesterday, for the spirit is a thing which is the same yesterday, to-day and forever. What opinion of our industrial order Jesus would hold, what measure of political reform He would advocate, what church or party or social group He would join may be doubtful. But what spirit He would show in this is not at all doubtful. Love would be the watchword of His days—love of nature, love of children, love of men, love of humanity, love of God. He would destroy prejudice, suspicion, bitterness, hatred, and foster understanding, trust, sympathy, goodwill. He would comfort sorrow and consecrate joy, pity weakness and humble strength. He would help everything which unites and hinder nothing but what divides. He would hail men as His brethren and serve them without distinction of color, creed or class. He would yearn for a better world, strive for a nobler race and gladly lay down His life for the kingdom. Whittier has summed it all up:—

"The letter fails, and systems fall,
And every symbol wanes;
The spirit overbrooding all,
—Eternal Love, remains."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

INTERNATIONAL LESSON,
APRIL 26.

Lesson IV. The Lost Sheep and the Lost Coin. Luke 15, 1-10. Golden Text, Luke 15, 10.

—Verse 1. Now—During this general period. No events intervene between this and our last lesson.

Publicans—Tax collectors for the Roman government, and despised of the Pharisees because serving the oppressors of the Jews. Moreover, there existed in Palestine the system of farming the taxes, and the collectors could, if dishonest, demand too much money and keep the balance for themselves.

Pharisees—Members of the religious-patriotic sect dating back in their origin to the Maccabean period or still earlier. They were strict in the literal observance of the Jewish law and ritual, bitter in their hatred of the Romans, and self-righteous and oppressive in their attitude toward the common people who knew not the law.

2. This man receiveth sinners—How much hope for the world lies in this fact!

Eateth with them—Mere association with the socially outcast, regardless of the motive prompting to such association, was enough to bar Jesus from fellowship with the Pharisees; according to their standards to eat with such outcasts involved social ostracism.

3. Unto them—To the Pharisees who found fault with Jesus for associating with publicans and sinners.

4. What man of you—Jesus appeals to their personal experience. The wealth of many of them may have consisted in flocks and herds.

One of them—Just one is lost and so many remain, yet the utmost concern is felt. Thus is the love of God for each individual shown.

Leave the ninety and nine—The ninety and nine are not neglected, but left in their usual summer pasturage, that is, the wilderness, or the uninhabited regions among the hills where they are properly tended and suffer no want.

And go after that which is lost, until he find it—The search is continued until the lost is found.

5. Layeth it on his shoulders—There is no upbraiding nor murmuring at the trouble. The shepherd returns rejoicing that the lost one is saved. Note the contrast between the tender feeling of the shepherd and the cold indifference of the Pharisees.

7. I say unto you—This note of authority is present in all the teaching of Jesus.

Joy in heaven—The interests of heaven and earth meet in the individual.

Repenteth—Both in the literal sense of facing about from the wrong to the right and in the sense of regret and sorrow for wrongdoings.

8. What woman having ten pieces of silver—The silver coin is the Greek drachma, worth about sixteen cents. Women of Palestine wear strings of these silver coins hanging from the head as ornaments. Perhaps the lost coin had been worn in this way.

Light a lamp—A peasant's hut has no window.

Until she find it—As in the case of the lost sheep, the earnest, persevering activity of the owner is emphasized.

9. A charming picture of simple village life in which the joys and sorrows of one person are shared by all.

10. Even so—In like manner not alone the angels, but the heavenly Father himself rejoices over one sinner that repenteth.

CANTON TO HAVE CARS.

Will Tear Down the Ancient Stone Walls.

The city of Canton, China, with a million and a half inhabitants, has no place for a street railway system. Canton is one of the wealthiest and most progressive of all the Chinese cities, and it would very much like a modern street railway system. But the space within the walls and fortifications is so crowded that many of the so-called streets are but narrow alleys, not even wide enough for two sedan chairs to pass. There is no room for horses and carriages, and certainly not sufficient space for a narrow-gauge railway. But the Chinese engineers are not so easily baffled, and Canton will have its electric railway. It is planned to tear down the ancient stone walls and fortifications which encircle the entire city.

The material from these walls will be used to fill some of the old canals which traverse the city. A three-track belt line will be constructed on the site of the old wall, completely encircling the city, and the old canal sites will be used for feeder lines.

HEALTH

Minor eye Troubles.

Our readers have been warned again and again of the many ills that follow continued eyestrain. When eyestrain is suspected, or when there are remote and mysterious symptoms that no other theory explains, no time should be lost in consulting competent authority; self-treatment is dangerous. But there are many eye affections less serious than strain, which a little knowledge on the part of the sufferer can relieve.

One painful and annoying accident that every one meets sooner or later is "a piece of something in the eye." It may be too small a thing to find, but how much pleasure it can ruin, and how much pain it can cause! We know we ought not to rub the eye, but few can restrain the impulse to do so. Rubbing often embeds the tiny particle firmly in the tissues, although it would probably work its way out in the copious flow of tears if it were left alone. Often a friend who has a steady hand can dislodge the troublesome intruder with a corner of a clean handkerchief, or, better still, a bit of absorbent cotton moistened with a little salt solution.

Do not forget that general good health is the best recipe for beauty in the eye. Dark circles and puffy, reddened lids will spoil the most brilliant orbs. Some persons who suffer from these afflictions, or from a weak and watery condition of the eyes, are much alarmed for fear they have some serious internal trouble, but the cause is often loss of sleep, over-fatigue, or a slight indigestion.

Avoid all tricks and affectations. Do not squint as a form of humor; for squinting is not funny; do not wink the eyes rapidly, under the impression that it looks interesting, and do not cultivate the sidelong glance that is characteristic of the long-lashed heroines of romance.

If you suffer from a succession of sties you had better see the oculist, because sties may be an evidence of eyestrain—indeed, some oculists believe that they are nothing else. A simple boracic acid eyewash is an excellent thing to have in the house. Keep it in a bottle with an eye-dropper. That will distinguish it from all other medicine bottles, and protect the eye from those baths of household ammonia or undiluted spirits of camphor that occasionally happen even in well-regulated families.—Youth's Companion.

Cure For Rheumatism.

There is a well-defined and reasonable idea that the germs of rheumatism and asthma are identical, and for these heroic doses of iodide of potassium are the best known destroyers. Those who suffer with either of these diseases, which are enough to make the victim's life scarcely worth having, might, with profit, try this remedy, says a writer in the Family Doctor. A famous prescription, which has been very successful in every case of rheumatism in which it has been tried, has iodide of potassium for its basis. An exceedingly obstinate and painful case of rheumatism of a slightly inflammatory sort, has been relieved, and is on the high road to a cure, by the use of compresses wet with iodide of potassium in saturated solution. This solution is merely dissolving in any given quantity of water all of the crystals that it will take. It is simple, inexpensive, easily prepared, and well worth trying.

Health Notes.

Tie a piece of lemon on a corn every night for five nights and it will generally cause it to drop out. The nervous child should lead a simple, regular life, and be kept free from excitement, living on wholesome, nourishing food, and plenty of fresh air.

To cure neuralgia light a piece of brown paper, blow out the flame, and inhale the smoke through the nostrils. In a few minutes the pain will have entirely disappeared.

Never give up to headache if you can possibly avoid it, for if you do it will fasten itself upon you and return at regular intervals. Throw it aside by action in some form, either physical or mental, as the case may require, and you will usually find yourself able to conquer it.

Hard Luck.

A man was talking about hard luck, and his friend listened with a sour expression. "Why, you don't know what hard luck is," said the friend. "I have always had it. When I was a kid there was such a bunch of us in the family that there had to be three tables at meal times, and I always got the third one." "What's hard about that?" snapped the other. "Why," says his friend, "it was fifteen years before I ever knew a chicken had anything but a neck."

To save time in baking sweet potatoes, parboil them first.

IMPURE BLOOD IN THE SPRING

The Passing of Winter Leaves People Weak and Depressed

As winter passes away it leaves many people feeling weak, depressed and easily tired. The body lacks that vital force and energy which pure blood alone can give.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are an all-year-round blood builder and nerve tonic, but they are especially useful in the spring. Every dose helps to make new, rich, red blood. Returning strength commences with their use and the vigor and cheerfulness of good health quickly follows.

There is just one cure for lack of blood and that is more blood. Food is the material from which blood is made, but Dr. Williams' Pink Pills double the value of the food we eat. They give strength, tone up the stomach, and weak digestion, clear the complexion of pimples, eruptions and boils, and drive out rheumatic poisons.

If you are pale and sallow, if you feel continually tired out, breathless after slight exertion, if you have headaches or backaches, if your joints ache, if your appetite fails and food does not nourish, sleep refresh you, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will make you pale and strong. To build up the blood is the special purpose of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and that is why they are the best spring medicine. If you feel the need of a tonic at this season give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial and you will rejoice in new health, new strength and new energy. Do not let the trying weather of summer find you weak and ailing. Build yourself up now with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—the pills that strengthen.

Ask for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and do not be persuaded to take something else. If your dealer does not keep these Pills they will be sent by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Stalked by Fifteen Lions.

A message from Cape Town gives details of the terrible fate which befell a Greek trader named Sataras while on a journey from Bantars. Accompanied only by a few natives Sataras was travelling in charge of some cattle, and one night when they were in camp, about forty miles from Sesheke, fifteen lions and lionesses appeared out of the scrub and carried off one of the oxen. The natives urged Sataras to remain in camp, but he was anxious to overtake another herd of cattle which was travelling in charge of a man named Laurie Kerr. All day the lions stalked the cattle, and darkness overtaking the party, Sataras fell a victim to them. The terrified natives ran on to Kerr's camp, but when he returned nothing but a few bones remained to tell of the tragedy.

Lady Was Wise.

I have just been told, writes a correspondent of the London Daily Chronicle, the story of a lady of title who lately heard that a suffragette attack was meditated against her country house. Instead of going into hysterics, summoning the police, and setting a guard round her premises, she quietly forwarded a substantial contribution to the headquarters of the militants. And now she feels safe. Even the wildest of the wild women would scorn to damage property of a supporter.

Stop Sneezing Quit Sniffeling Cure Your Cold

THE SOOTHING VAPORS OF CATARRHOZONE BRING INSTANTANEOUS RELIEF.

Thousands of Testimonials Prove That Catarrhozone Cures Permanently.

When germs attack the lining of the nose, make you sneeze and gag, when later on they infect the bronchial tubes, how can you follow them with a cough syrup?

You can't do it—that's all. Cough syrup goes to the stomach—that's why they fail.

But Catarrhozone goes everywhere—gets right after the germs—kills them—breaks the soreness—cures the inflammation—makes Catarrh disappear.

"Nothing I have ever used gives the warm, soothing sensation of Catarrhozone," writes Isabel Fry, of Seguin, Ont. "It cures the cold and sore throat with catarrh of the nose and throat—had droppings, hard breathing, bad breath and indigestion. Catarrhozone relieved at once and cured me thoroughly. It is invaluable in colds, sore throat and bronchial trouble." Not difficult for Catarrhozone to cure, because it contains the essences of pine balsams and other antiseptics that help mean death to catarrh. Large size costs $1.00, and contains two months' treatment; smaller sizes 25c. and 50c., all druggists and storekeepers of The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

ALCOHOL v. MEMORY.

Number of Experiments With Beer And Memory Tried.

Dr. Smith, of Heidelberg, Germany, has recently conducted some experiments which show how thoroughly alcohol disturbs the memory. A number of persons were given three or four glasses of beer a day and required to memorize certain sentences, and write them down on paper. Half a dozen experiments were made with each person. No sentence was longer than four lines. The person was given the sentence and told to go and write it out; in fifteen or twenty minutes another sentence was given and the process repeated.

For twenty days these experiments were carried on. The same amount of beer was given daily. After the sixth day the errors and losses in memory increased, and on the twentieth day the losses amounted to 70 per cent.; that is, in one hundred experiments over seventy of them were errors and mistakes. The faults of memory steadily increased. The first day's experiments showed a small amount of error. Then there was a steady increase.

This experiment confirms Professor Krapnel's tests of remembering numbers and words. He found that without alcohol one hundred figures could be remembered after forty repetitions, an average of two and a half numbers to each repetition. With alcohol the same person could only remember sixty figures after sixty repetitions, an average of one number for each repetition. This showed a diminution of normal memory to the extent of over 40 per cent.

In every day life, where accuracy of memory is called for, it is a common fact that alcohol drinkers are the most unreliable. Events which the person had intense interest in seemed to make little or no impression on the brain when under the influence of spirits, and only with difficulty could be recalled. Even when remembered they were distorted and inaccurate.

These experiments bring out the astonishing fact that the memory, of all the brain functions, suffers most pronouncedly from the use of alcohol.

A MOTHER'S PRAISE OF BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mrs. Fred Tinkham, South Canaan, N.S., writes: "Please send me another box of Baby's Own Tablets as I do not care to be without them. I have used them repeatedly and consider them the best medicine in the world for little ones." Thousands of other mothers say the same thing. The tablets cure all the minor ills of childhood such as constipation, sour stomach, colic, colds, simple fevers, etc., and are guaranteed to be absolutely safe. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

GREETED EXILE IN SIBERIA.

Woman of Seventy Who Suffers in the Cause of Freedom.

"Babushka," the Russian word for "little grandmother," is the half-endearing, half-respectful name applied by revolutionaries to Mme. Katherine Breshkovsky, whose recent attempt to escape from her living tomb in Siberia created such a stir.

A large number of Russian refugees in London assembled recently to celebrate "Babushka's" seventieth birthday, and a wonderful story was unfolded by numerous speakers, marshalled by M. Karpovitch, himself a celebrated revolutionary, who escaped from Siberia a few years ago.

Though born in a well-to-do family, and married to a landowner, Mme. Breshkovsky did not hesitate to forsake her husband and her children to enter the ranks of the first "propagandists" among the peasantry. That was in the early seventies.

For doing this she was arrested, kept in prison for three years, and then arraigned with 193 others before a special tribunal, which sent her to the Siberian mines for four years. In 1881 she made her escape, but was caught and sentenced once more to four years' hard labor, with subsequent settlement in Siberia for life.

But no amount of hardship and vile treatment could break her indomitable spirit, and in 1897 she simply took the train back to Russia, and, ignoring the authorities, helped to establish the Revolutionary Socialist party. Subsequently she undertook a lecture tour to the United States to obtain funds for the "cause."

Her arrest in 1907 followed on the denunciation of the notorious spy and agent-provocateur Azef. Arraigned once more—this time with M. Nicholas Tehaykovsky—she was condemned in 1910 to banishment to Siberia. Though an old woman, broken in health, she made a daring attempt to escape in December last.

Nearly every man is willing to do his duty as he sees it.

TOYS WHICH ARE EXPENSIVE.

Manchester Guardian Bemoans "Unfortunate Fashion."

The London correspondent of The Manchester Guardian has been giving an account of the enormously costly presents which it is now the unfortunate fashion to give to children of the rich.

The most outrageously expensive toys are calmly accepted by fond parents as well merited tributes to the children's charms, as visitors to country houses, especially at Christmas, know to their cost. A small boy, who would probably have been equally content with a half-crown box of soldiers, was recently presented with a £40 man-of-war, the donor's regrets that he had not been able to get it complete with guns (costing a solid hundred guineas) being received with quite mild disclaimers by the small boy's parents. The tiniest children are presented with such things as grocer's shops completely fitted and costing a small fortune, and expensive mechanical toys.

Added to this, the appalling fashion of jewellery for children has come over from America, and the daughters of American peers and others possess complete miniature jewel cases and expensive, if tiny, rings. In contrast, the writer quotes a description of two of the children of the Queen (when she was Princess of Wales) playing happily in the garden at Frogmore with cheap spades and buckets, although presumably they had any toys they could wish for. Every possessor of a nursery will appreciate the truth of the moral. The over-expensive toy kills imagination by leaving nothing to it, and it is just in the exercise of imagination that a true child so much delights.

UPWARD START

After Changing to Postum.

Many a talented person is kept back because of the interference of tea or coffee with the nourishment of the body.

This is especially so with those whose nerves are very sensitive, as is often the case with talented persons. There is a simple, easy way to get rid of tea and coffee troubles, and a lady's experience along these lines is worth considering. She says:

"Almost from the beginning of the use of coffee it hurt my stomach. By the time I was fifteen I was almost a nervous wreck, nerves all unstrung, no strength to endure the most trivial thing, either work or fun.

"There was scarcely anything I could eat that would agree with me. The little I did eat seemed to give me more trouble than it was worth. I was literally starving; was so weak I could not sit up long at a time.

"It was then a friend brought me a hot cup of Postum. I drank part of it and after an hour I felt as though I had had something to eat—felt strengthened. That was about five years ago, and after continuing Postum in place of coffee and gradually getting stronger, to-day I can eat and digest anything I want, walk as much as I want. My nerves are steady.

"I believe the first thing that did me any good and gave me an upward start was Postum, and I use it altogether now instead of coffee."

HAND WOULD CRACK WITH SALT RHEUM

Pained and Burned. Hard and Sore Lumps. Couldn't Rest or Sleep. Finger Swollen. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

Lagere Corner, N. B.—"I had salt rheum on my hand for a good many years. Every winter my hand would crack and part of the time I had to wear a glove to do my work, for when I washed in hot water with it unwrapped it used to irritate so much that I didn't know what to do. I had to take a rough towel and rub it until the blood would come sometimes. Many a night I had to sit up in bed and rub them and sometimes that didn't satisfy. I had to scratch with my fingers and the next morning I would find a big piece of skin which I had taken off. This winter I had sores on one of my hands. I thought they were ulcers. They pained and burned. They started just like a little lump and would be hard and sore and after that there would be a big bunch of pus and when that would be out it would leave an opening almost as big as half a five-cent piece. I couldn't rest or sleep with the pain and the burning sensation. The ulcer I had on my finger this winter was still worse. There was more inflammation for my finger was swollen almost twice its natural size and was just as red as a piece of flannel.

"I took the Cuticura Soap and made a lumps of it and washed the hand with it. I took the Cuticura Ointment and spread it on a piece of cotton and wrapped the hand with it. I was cured in a little over a week."

Constipation

is an enemy within the camp. It will undermine the strongest constitution and ruin the most vigorous health. It leads to indigestion, biliousness, impure blood, bad complexion, sick headaches, and is one of the most frequent causes of appendicitis. To neglect it is slow suicide. GUEST WHO DOESN'T PAY.

If a guest leaves a Japanese hotel without paying his bill, a broom is dressed up, his name is attached to it, and it is inverted as a sign of disrespect, says W. L. Hildburgh.

Free Lunches in England.

The free lunch has never been properly tried in England—chips of cheese and very dry biscuits being as far as it has gone. But one comes across occasionally a hostelry where the price charged for a good square meal is reduced almost to vanishing point. This writer passes every day two establishments that are carrying on a friendly war as to which shall give the cheapest dinner. As it stands at present, one advertises, "cut off the joint, two vegetables, and bread and cheese, for 6d." while the other is a short head behind with "a good old English dinner for 6d."

The Touch of Genius.

Sandy Macpherson started to build a small outhouse of brick. After the usual plan of bricklayers, he worked from the inside, and, as he had the material close beside him, the walls were rising fast when noon arrived, and with it his son, Jock, who brought his father's dinner.

With honest pride in his eye, Sandy looked at Jock over the wall on which he was engaged, and asked:

"Hoo d'ye think I'm gettin' on?"

"Famous, feyther; but hoo dae ye get oot? You've forgot the door!"

One glance round him showed Sandy that his son was right; but looking kindly at him, he said:

"Man Jock, you've got a gran' heid on ye! Ye'll be an architect yet, as sure's yer feyther's a builder."

Surveying North Australia.

Captain H. V. Barclay, who three years ago left Melbourne with nine assistants and a string of 12 camels to explore the Northern Territory of Australia on behalf of the Federal Government, has returned to Melbourne. For the past 18 months he has been engaged on survey work on the north coast, principally in the vicinity of the Pelje Islands, where there is a likelihood of a harbor being made for trade development and possibly a naval base. Since leaving Melbourne Captain Barclay, now 70 years of age, has travelled over 5,000 miles and examined 3,000 miles of coast line. He thinks the territory is distinctly a white man's country.

HAD A PERFECT ALIBI.

And Plenty of Witnesses Stood Ready to Testify to It.

A lawyer in Portland, Ore., was assigned to defend a Chinaman accused of murder. He had a talk with the official interpreter, who in turn had talked with the man in jail, and that same person assured the lawyer that the prisoner was innocent; that at the time of the crime he had been miles away in a railroad camp. Later they went to the jail to have a talk with the prisoner.

The official interpreter held a long conversation, the lawyer giving him the questions. It seemed all straight and regular. The interpreter testified that the prisoner had a perfect alibi. It was some weeks before the case was called, and shortly before that time the lawyer had another talk with the accused man. The official interpreter had disappeared, and so he secured for his interpreter this time a Chinaman who had been his cook and who talked fairly good English. They went to the jail.

"Tell him," he instructed the interpreter, "that I want him to relate to me again the exact circumstances, all he knows about this, the whole truth and particularly where he was that night."

The two Chinese jabbered together for fifteen minutes. Then the interpreter turned and said, "He says after he shot the man he hid down Morrison street and threw pistol in McGuire's fish yard."

"Hold on!" yelled the lawyer. "That can't be true. Ask him again. According to the other story he was miles away and didn't shoot the man at all."

There was another long conversation between the interpreter and the prisoner. Then the interpreter said, "Oh, yes, he shot the man. He says he shot him in 'un down Morrison street and throw pistol into McGuire's fish yard."

"But," insisted the lawyer, "I was told he was not in the city at all that night, but miles away in a railroad camp."

The interpreter smiled blandly. "Oh, yes," he assented cheerfully, "he have plenty witnesses to prove that."—Saturday Evening Post.

WIT OF A MORO UMPIRE.

He Had Learned Our Language Fast and Knew How to Use It.

Captain John E. Morris of the Sixth Infantry was at one time, some years ago, stationed with his company in some inaccessible Moro town. Morris thought that if the Moros of his district could become interested in some sporting stunt outside of head hunting the United States insurance companies' mortality tables could readily be read just so far as soldiers were concerned, so he encouraged his men to teach the Moros baseball. When a man is playing baseball he is not chopping off heads, and Captain Morris appreciated this fact.

Two baseball teams were organized, a Moro team and a team from Morris' company, and one day the first game of the series was to be pulled off. The question of the umpire was the great one of the moment, and after much discussion a native Moro was selected to pass upon the fine points of the game.

In Filipino "umpire" is properly expressed as "makifula," and when Captain Morris arrived on the scene of the proposed ball game the Moro who was to be umpire approached him.

"Makifula, me," remarked the Moro. Captain Morris looked at the native umpire without in the slightest understanding what he was driving at. "I'm glad you are a makifula," he remarked, "but please inform me what the word means."

"Mons makifula of Americans," replied the Moro. "Me learn American language fast."—San Francisco Chronicle.

Counting a Herring Catch.

The fact that the record catch of herrings was 320 crans, is proof positive that they were captured on the east coast of Scotland. On the west of Scotland herrings are counted, not measured. A "maze" of herrings is five long hundreds, and a long hundred is 123. At Yarmouth and Grimsby they are counted by the "warp," which is four, and thirty three of these make a long hundred. Ten hundreds make a "thousand" and ten "thousands" a "last." Therefore, when a hundred not a hundred?—London Standard.

Rheuma puts the blood in condition to ward off other diseases and eradicates rheumatic conditions from the whole system. Recommended for all forms of rheumatism. 50 cent at T. G. Whitfield. This letter will convince you of its great value.

For nine weeks I was unable to work owing to my feet being badly swollen from rheumatism. I also suffered severe pains in the back. After using two bottles of rheuma the rheumatism has entirely left me. F. H. Morris, Fort Erie, Ont.

Inquiry Madoc, April 15th.

DEAR MR. EDITOR:

Would you kindly inform the writer and others if there is any Provincial or Municipal law regulating the weight of a loaf or half loaf of bread and if so what? Respectfully yours.

ANSWER:—There is a Provincial law but the power of enforcing this law is delegated to local municipalities for enforcement. The weight of a full loaf of bread, according to law, should be four pounds and a half loaf two pounds.

Boom in Madoc Real Estate

Notwithstanding the general financial depression there continues to be almost weekly proofs of an upward tendency in the values of property in this village. During the last year there have been many changes of property at increased prices and those who have had sufficient foresight to make good investments have been able to turn over their property at handsome profits. There are many properties that can still be bought at prices far below their real value, and those contemplating the purchase of homes should secure them while present prices exist.

Madoc Boy's Success

The Review extends congratulations to Mr. Albert L. Elliott, an old Madoc High-school boy who has been spending the last few years in the provinces beyond the great lakes. He obtained his non-professional second from the Madoc High school, took his professional in the Regina Normal, taught a few years and then took an Arts course in the University of Manitoba, where he was graduated in 1911. During the last three years he has been studying Theology in the Manitoba College, has been licensed and ordained by the Presbyterian church and has just accepted a unanimous call to Harte church, Manitoba. Mr. Elliott's course is one well worthy of being imitated by our Madoc boys.

The finder is requested to pull out the red string from the case, to cut the aluminum case from the framework, not to touch the instrument in the case, to keep it carefully, and notify the Director of the Meteorological Service, Toronto, Canada, who will send a box for returning the instrument. On its receipt an award of $2.50 will be paid. The other parts need not be returned. Have Pretty Hair

Thick, Soft, Fluffy, and no Dandruff—Use Parisian Sage

If your hair is losing its natural color, coming out and splitting, or lacks that enviable softness, gloss and beauty, do not despair—pretty hair is largely a matter of care. If it is harsh and brittle soften it up—lubricate it. If you have dandruff it is because the scalp is too dry and flakes off. Freshen up the scalp with Parisian Sage—all dandruff disappears, falling hair and itching head cease, your hair is doubly beautiful.

Parisian Sage, sold by T. G. Whitfield and at all drug counters, is just what you need, a large bottle costs but 50 cents. It surely makes the hair lustrous and seven times as abundant. You cannot be disappointed in Parisian Sage.

Mrs. Anderson has been a splendid type of a christian. The funeral took place at the Salem church, Rev. J. E. Glover officiating. Interment was made in Salem cemetery.

The decorating of your walls is quite a problem. You want them to be pleasing in color and appearance so as to make a suitable background for your furniture and pictures.

So the ideal wall finish should be artistic in texture and coloring, absolutely sanitary, and capable of being cleaned if necessary with soap and water—and durable—to avoid a too frequent expense for redecorating.

Wall papers do not meet all these requirements, the patterns and designs fade, the papers themselves collect dust and germs and cannot be properly cleaned. Sanitary experts have proven that any kind of wall paper is unsanitary, and the custom of applying new paper over the old, affords a breeding place for germs.

Kalsomine and other water paints, while clean and sanitary, have not the necessary permanency. They need frequent renewal and often rub off on ones clothing—smudges and finger marks cannot be washed off satisfactorily.

The product that meets every requirement is Sherwin-Williams Flat-tone, a durable, flat-drying oil paint made in a variety of twenty-four beautiful shades, the selection of expert decorators. This finish can be washed with soap and water, and will last for years.

Come and see us about S-W Flat-tone. It is put up in liquid form ready for use. Ask for a color card of the pleasing shades.

A MODEST CANDIDATE.

He Uses the Movies to Show Himself in His Best Light.

A French politician who seeks election to the council of one of the departments has adopted a time and labor saving scheme to urge his claims on his constituents. Perhaps the old nose praying machine inspired him.

Instead of haranguing the voters at election meetings he invites them to a cinematograph theater. There to the popular music one or two picture comedies are shown.

Then the candidate appears on the screen. He is seen addressing a meeting, shaking hands with the prefect and entering his motorcar. Another reel of film shows him helping an old woman to load her donkey with a bundle of wood, indignantly refusing a bribe and paying a visit to an old man stretched on a bed of illness.

In the last and most effective picture of the series the sympathetic candidate proves his heart is in the right place by discreetly slipping a banknote into the sick man's hand before bidding him an adieu.—Paris Cor Washington Herald.

A Liquid That Floats Stones.

Of all liquids, mercury possesses the greatest specific gravity, but another has recently been discovered which is also so heavy that stones of all kinds—granite, limestone, quartz, etc.—float in it. It is a saturated aqueous solution of tungstoborate. Its specific gravity is 3.3, whereas that of ordinary rocks does not exceed 2.7. Only a few precious stones have a specific gravity greater than that of this liquid, for which reason it is proposed to employ it for the separation of such stones from masses of broken rock.

L.O.O.F. Attend Divine Service

The 95th anniversary of the L.O.O.F. was held on Sunday, April 29th, 1914. About sixty members of the L.O.O.F. Lodge, No. 179, left the lodge-room at 10.50 and proceeded to the Methodist church, where they were met by about forty Sister Rebekahs of Oakdale Lodge, No. 131, Madoc, this being the first opportunity given these well-known Societies of meeting together on an occasion of this kind since the organization of Oakdale Lodge, No. 131. Rev. H. V. Mounter, pastor of the Methodist church, preached a very impressive and interesting sermon based on the principals of Fraternism, text taken from Romans 12: 10. Special music was rendered by the choir and Miss Myrtle Caverly sang "The Crystal River," which was highly appreciated by all present. Instead of the emblematic badge each member wore a beautiful deep pink carnation. Owing to the fact that the weather was very unsettled the out-of-town members present were few. Among them we note the Messrs. Parnell, M. Vandervort, J. York, O. Wannamaker, B. McCoy, of Eldorado, and Mr. R. McGuire, of Tweed. All Oddfellows are invited to attend divine service next Sunday with the L.O.O.F. Lodge, No. 230, Stirling, at the hour of 2 o'clock p.m.

Civil Rebellion in Ulster

Events have moved very fast in Ulster during the last few days and probably before the end of the week blood will be shed in civil strife. The Government is determined rebellion must be put down if the nation is to exist. The Ulsterites are determined to oppose the introduction of Home Rule into Ireland and the Government is just as determined that Ireland shall have it. Every friend of Great Britain will earnestly hope that the history of the mother country will be passed without bloodshed.

"Grade" Stallions to be Prohibited

After 1918 horse breeding in Ontario will reach the level those interested in the building up of a great horse raising industry have been aiming at for many years past. From that time on only pure-bred stallions will be allowed in service in the province, the necessary legislation to that end having been introduced into the Legislature yesterday by Hon. James Duff, Minister of Agriculture. The bill was brought before the House as an amendment to the Stallion Enrollment Act, and besides the provisions for eliminating cross-bred animals, makes enrollment and inspection of all stallions compulsory. The prohibition of "grade" stallions will be carried out in two stages. The first stage will be reached in 1916 when the poorer medium class of "grade" animals must go out of service. Two years later the prohibition becomes complete. Another important amendment for protection of pure bred cattle was introduced by the Minister. It provides penalties for any owner who allows bulls to run at large, and provides a right of recovery for the farmer whose stock is injured thereby.

"Clean-up Day" Has Arrived

With the spring season upon us the question of cleaning up the back lanes and yards will demand particular attention. During the winter months from many residences and business houses the refuse has been thrown on the ash-pile, and now a heap of considerable size ornaments the rear of the lot. With spring weather setting in and the warm sun at work, our citizens will soon be forcibly reminded of the fact that it is time the pile was removed, and just as likely as not the health officer will do a little reprimanding as well.

A health officer holds a position that is about the most thankless that any man can hold, and yet it is one of the most necessary. It ought to be remembered by the people that the health officer views things not from the standpoint of one individual, but from the standpoint of the entire community, and with him the ever present policy is that it is better for one member to suffer than that the whole community perish.

It is therefore not a question of waiting one's convenience for the removal of a nuisance, but the bigger question of what is the danger to the community by the delay.

Brown—Sargent

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lono Sargent on April 22, at three p.m. when their daughter, Blanche was united in marriage to Mr. Geo. Brown of Wensley. Miss May Green acted as bridesmaid while the groom was assisted by Mr. Archie Palmateer, the nuptial knot was tied by Rev. Woodger. The bride looked charming in a gown of blue satin draped with shadow lace. The bridesmaid wore a gown of blue silk. The bride received many useful and handsome presents showing the high esteem in which they are held. After the ceremony the guests numbering about thirty were invited to the table where a sumptuous repast was partaken of. The young couple left on Friday morning for their new home at Wensley.

A Foolish Young Man;

Or, the Belle of the Season.

She did not refuse; indeed, she appeared to have forgotten his presence; together they crossed the lawn and reached the corner of the house near which the figure had disappeared. It struck Stafford as strange that the dogs did not bark. In profound silence they went in the direction the figure had taken, and Stafford presently saw a ruined building which had evidently been a chapel. As they approached it the figure came out of it and towards them. As it passed them, so close that they instinctively drew back, Stafford saw that it was an old man in a dressing-gown; his head was bare, his hair touched the collar of the gown. His eyes were wide open, and gazing straight in front of him. Stafford was about to step forward and arrest his progress, when suddenly the girl's hand seized his and scribbled it.

"Hush!" she whispered, with subdued terror. "It is my father. He—yes, he is asleep! Oh, see, he is asleep! He will fall—hurt himself—"

She, in her turn, was about to spring forward, but Stafford caught her arm. "No, no, you must not!" he said, in a hurried whisper. "I think it would be dangerous. I think he is all right. If you let him alone, he is walking in his sleep. Don't make—don't cry out."

"No, no," she breathed. "But it is dreadful! Instinctively, unconsciously, she drew closer to Stafford, almost clung to him, watching her father over her shoulder until the figure, with its chaunt, mechanical movement and vacant stare, had passed into the house; then, with a long breath, and with her hands clasped, she stood as if she were listening, quickly and noiselessly up the steps and disappeared also.

Wondering whether he was awake or dreaming, Stafford waited for over an hour to see if she would come back; and he was turning away at last, when his figure appeared in the open doorway like that of a wraith. She waved her hand to him, then disappeared, and the door closed. Still asking himself if he were not in a land of dreams, but tingling with the touch of her small hand, with the haunting perfume of the soft black hair, Stafford walked the road and walked towards the inn.

CHAPTER IV.

Ida had followed her father across the terrace, across the hall, lit weirdly by the glow of the sinking fire, and the pale moonlight, up the broad stairs, along the corridor to the open door of his room. He had walked slowly, but steadily with his usual gait, and his head bent slightly; though his eyes were wide open, he seemed to see nothing, yet he did not stumble or even hesitate. Ida followed behind him with absolute noiselessness. Then she remembered Stafford, remembered him with a start of discomfort and embarrassment. Was he waiting there with that gravity in their eyes which dogs wear when they are puzzled.

The old man closed his door softly, still without any hesitation, and Ida, grasping the broad rail of the staircase, stole to the door and opened it; the light was streaming into the room and she saw him under the trees. There was something in the attitude of the erect figure that reminded her of a soldier on guard, and when she had waved her hand to him, she did not quite close the door, but watched him slowly down the road, looking back at the house now and again as if to see if she wanted him.

When she closed the door, signed to the dogs to lie down before the fire, and went up to her room, after pausing beside her father's door and listening to his regular breathing. Her room was a large one—nearly all the rooms in the place were large—and as she undressed herself slowly she looked round it with a novel sense of loneliness. The tall shadows of her graceful yet girlish figure were cast grotesquely on the wall by the candles beside her glass. She had never felt lonely before, though her life ever since she had arrived at the Hall might be called one almost of solitude. That sense of loneliness had come upon her suddenly as she had watched the young man's retreating figure. She could not help thinking of him even when her mind was oppressed with anxiety on her father's account. In a vague way she remembered how kind this stranger had been; how quietly, and with what an air of protection, he had stood by her and restrained her from crying out and alarming her father. As vaguely, she remembered that in the moment of her terror she had clung to him, had forgotten under the great strain that he was a stranger—and a man. Even now she did not know his name, knew nothing of him and that he was staying at "The Woodman Inn."

Kind and considerate as he had been, she thought of him with something like resentment; it was as if he had stepped into her life, had intruded upon its quiet uneventfulness. He had no right to have seen her father in that terrible state of death, and she was so sure he had behaved like a frightened servant-maid, had not only clung to him—had she clung to him, or was it only fancy?—but had left him without a word of thanks, had allowed him to wait there, deeply that Jessie had led him to him just as she had seen Jessie the maid wave her hand to her young man after they had parted, and she was going into the house.

When she had undressed she went again to her father's door and listened to his deep and regular breathing; then, at last, she went to bed, but she lay awake for hours thinking of that bent figure walking in its silent chapel. For the future she would have to watch her father closely, would perhaps have to go to the door of his room. Why had he gone to the chapel? So far as she knew, indeed, she did not remember having seen him so there in his waking moments. She knew nothing of somnambulism; but she imagined that he had gone in that direction by mere chance, that if he had happened to find any impediment in his way he might as easily have gone in another direction.

She fell asleep at last and slept an hour beyond her usual time, and so that when dawn came, she found herself without waking her beloved young mistress, Ida dressed and ready to rush through her mind, and hurried to her father's room. The door was open, she ran down the stairs and found him in his usual room, and she kissed him, wishing him good-morning as casually as she could.

"You are up early this morning, father," she said, trying to keep her tone from being too earnest.

He glanced at the clock calmly. "No, you are later," he said. "I was a little tired and over-slept this morning, father."

When she had poured out her father's coffee, she took it round to him and let her hand rest on his shoulder lovingly; and he thoughtfully for a moment, and Mr. Heron was unlocking it and taking out the few letters and papers, and seemed unconscious of the little anxious caress.

"Are there any for me, father?" she asked, opening her hand to turn the envelopes on their right side; but he merely glanced at some of them, but presently he came to one which, after a sharp squint, which he knew was a woman's, then he returned it to its envelope and, with a secretive movement, slipped it into the pocket of his dressing-gown.

"I was afraid he would be upset," he said, looking at her sharply. "They are all for me; they are business letters, bookkeepers' catalogues, sale catalogues—nothing of importance."

She went back to her place, and he waited until she had done so before he began to open the letters. He merely glanced at some of them, but presently he came to one which, after a sharp squint, which he knew was a woman's, then he returned it to its envelope and, with a secretive movement, slipped it into the pocket of his dressing-gown.

"I'm sure I don't know how you will pay them," he said, as if she alone were responsible.

"I can't pay all of them at once," she replied, cheerfully. "But I can some, and the rest I can send four—perhaps five—of the steers to the monthly market, and then there are the sheep—"

She looked at him now and glanced at them, and the old man watched her covertly, with a curious expression on his face.

"I'm sure I don't know how you will pay them," he said, as if she alone were responsible.

"I can't pay all of them at once," she replied, cheerfully. "But I can some, and the rest I can send four—perhaps five—of the steers to the monthly market, and then there are the sheep—" ill-gotten wealth. I'm told that such a man is received, yes, and welcomed by society. Society! The word is a misnomer. In my time a man of that class was kept at arm's length, was relegated to his proper place—the back hall; but he was gazed at with a mixture of awe and contempt. And this man has chosen to build his house on Heron Hall, within sight of the house which—while he would not have been permitted to enter, if I had known I would have sold the land."

"But you wanted the money, father," she said, gently.

He looked at her swiftly, and a change came over his face, a look of caution, almost of cunning.

"Yes, yes, of course I wanted it. But he knew I should not have sold it for building on that is why he got Bowen, the farmer, to buy it. It was like him; only such a man can be capable of such an underhand act. And now I suppose he will be welcomed by his neighbors, and the Vaynes, and the Bostons, and the rest, and made much of. They'll eat his dinners, and their women will go to his balls and concerts—the same as his neighbors, who will not acknowledge him, who will not cross the threshold of Sir Stephen Orme's brand-new palace, or invite him to enter his house. He shall not darken the doors of Heron Hall."

He rose as he spoke and left the room with a quicker step than usual. But an hour later when Ida went into the library she found him absorbed in his books as usual, and he only glanced up at her with absent, unseeing eyes, as she stood beside him, putting on her gloves, her hand caught up under her elbow, the old felt hat just asked on the soft, silky hair.

"Do you see anything before I go out, father?" she asked.

"No, no!" he replied absently, and then he looked at her again as he answered.

She rode to a distant part of the dale where the rough, headless steers were grazing; she surveyed them critically, chose those that should go to market, then turned, and leaving a basket, gained an ascent to the top of the dale, on she came to an opening on the verge of the lake, and she pulled up, arrested by the great white house on the other side, which was literally glittering in the brilliant sunlight.

It was a new building, a new building, in fact, it made the English lake look, for the moment, like an Italian one. She regarded it thoughtfully for a moment, then returned to the road, and as she did so she saw Stafford coming towards her.

Stafford's heart leapt at sight of her with a sudden pleasure which puzzled her, as she gazed beside him, and she admitted to herself that he had walked in this direction in the hope, on the chance, of meeting her.

"Good-morning," he said, in his direct fashion, raising his cap. "I am very fortunate to meet you. I hope Mr. Heron is no worse for—is not ill?"

"No," she said, in her clear, low voice. "My father is quite well; he is just as he usually is this morning."

"I am very glad," said Stafford. He stood close beside the horse and looked at her with a steady gaze. He merely glanced at some of them, but presently he came to one which, after a sharp squint, which he knew was a woman's, then he returned it to its envelope and, with a secretive movement, slipped it into the pocket of his dressing-gown.

"I'm sure I don't know how you will pay them," he said, as if she alone were responsible.

"I can't pay all of them at once," she replied, cheerfully. "But I can some, and the rest I can send four—perhaps five—of the steers to the monthly market, and then there are the sheep—"

She looked at him now and glanced at them, and the old man watched her covertly, with a curious expression on his face.

"I'm sure I don't know how you will pay them," he said, as if she alone were responsible.

in, but she went on slowly, as if he had not spoken.

"I was—frightened; it was sudden, so unexpected. My father—he never done it before—that I know of—and he looked—her voice broke for a moment—so strange, so ghastly, as I thought at first that it was the Heron ghost which, they say, haunts the dale, though I have never seen it."

She raised her eyes, and her lips and shone in her eyes, and Stafford was so fascinated by the sudden gleam of girlishness that he had to bend and pat her, who was planting dusty impressions on his trousers in her frantic efforts to gain his attention.

"I did nothing; in fact, as I walked away I was fuming because I couldn't help you—couldn't do more."

"You did help me," she said, gravely; then she looked across the lake to Sir Stephen's "little place." "I was admiring that new house. Don't you think it is very beautiful, rising so white and gracefully above the lake?"

"Yes," said Stafford. "Rather conspicuous, though, isn't it?"

She laughed suddenly, and Stafford asked, with surprise:

"Why do you laugh?"

"Oh, I was thinking of my father," she said, with a delicious frankness; "he was quite angry about it this morning. It seems that it is built on our land—or was ours—and he dislikes the idea of anyone building at Brydennere."

"So should I," said Stafford, laconically.

And besides, she went on, her eyes fixed on the great white building, so that she did not see his embarrassment. "My father does not like the man who built it. He thinks that he got the land unfairly; and he—my father—calls him all sorts of hard names."

Stafford bit his lips, and his face wore the expression which came into it when he was facing an ugly summer. He would have shirked this one if he could, but it had to be faced, so he rushed it.

"I'm sorry," he said. "My father built it."

She did not start, but she turned her head and looked at him, with a sudden coldness in the glorious eyes.

NO MOBILIZATION OF TROOPS

Not a Single Order Has Been Issued by the United States War Secretary

A despatch from Washington says: Not a single order, either tentative or definite, has been transmitted from the Secretary for War to Brigadier-General A. C. Miles, chief of the Bureau of Military Affairs, for the mobilization of the National Guard of any state of the Union.

This was the unqualified announcement made in the office of General Miles at the close of the official business on Wednesday in that bureau. The statement was predicated upon the continuous stream of ill-advised requests for information volleyed into Washington from every quarter of the United States.

Also it was said in the office of the Secretary for War that no action had been taken looking to the mobilization of the militia. Secretary Garrison let it be known that he looked to General Miles' bureau staff to keep the War Department informed as to the exact condition of all the National Guards of the various states, and that he was convinced the bureau had every item of necessary information ready at hand and all plans for the mobilization of the guard if orders for mobilization shall issue.

Volunteers for service in Mexico will not be called for unless there is a formal declaration of war by Congress. This was announced in the House by Chairman Hay, of the House Military Affairs Committee.

MADOC, APRIL 30, 1914

Coe Hill

The J.P.'s of this town seem to be kept quite busy, looks like house cleaning all right.
Miss G. M. Gunter has returned to Trenton to continue her High School studies.
Misses Jane Chase and Kathleen Shannon, who have been visiting Miss Mercy Danford, have returned to their homes in Trenton.
Mr. P. Finnigan's attractive home was burnt last week. The cause of the fire is a mystery.
Everybody reported a good time at Mr. T. Blackburn's sugar party.
Mr. H. S. MacNaughton, a former school teacher in this village, was here Easter looking up old acquaintances.
Mr. F. V. Gunter and family have moved West.
You'll notice, Ormsby, that Coe Hill is again on the baseball map, so beware because we notice that their secretary-treasurer is again in playing form.
Coe Hill baseball players held a very successful meeting in Nugent's store on April 22nd, and it can be easily seen that they used good judgment by electing the following officers for the season of 1914:—Hon. Pres., W. H. Nugent; Pres., D. Clarke; Vice-Pres., A. J. Bristol; Sec.-Treas., W. T. Nugent; Manager, Jack Kirby; Captain, Hugh McCall; Mascot, Earl Taylor.

Local auto owners would perhaps be interested to know that the Motor Vehicles Act has been further amended by the Ontario Legislature by the insertion of the following clause: "No motor vehicle while travelling upon a highway shall have attached to it and exposed to view any flag, streamer or similar decoration made of bunting, paper or similar material." The above clause puts a ban on pennants and other similar decorations that are so often seen flying from the sides of automobiles.

A branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce has been opened in the Wright block, under the permanent management of Mr. A. Y. Snider. The Canadian Bank of Commerce is one of the strongest financial institutions in Canada and has a paid-up capital of $15,000,000, with a reserve fund of $13,500,000. It is to be hoped that this institution will receive its share of the business of this community.

Saturday Night Fire

Saturday night about the hour of twelve a wild cry of "Fire! Fire!" rang through the almost deserted streets; harsh gratings of upraised windows resounded, protruding heads of disheveled hair were seen. Yells of "Where is the nearest fire alarm?" were heard. The fire bell rang. A half lathered man bolted from the barber's chair, all because Mr. Reeve's chimney was on fire.

Madoc Women's Institute

The Women's Institute held their regular meeting at the home of Mrs. W. H. Kells on Friday, April 24th. Mrs. Kilpatrick and Mrs. W. Elliot furnished the program, while Mrs. Watson and Mrs. Harrison assisted Mrs. Kells with the lunch, which was enjoyed very much. The next meeting will be held May 22nd at the home of Mrs. John Whytock. As this will be the last meeting of the year, it is quite necessary all the members attend.

Police Court

Messrs. Geo. Deline, Alvy Lowery, and Jas. Lammisse, of Millbridge, and Fred Taylor, of Springbrook, appeared before Magistrate Casement on Tuesday last to answer to the charge of being intoxicated in a local option municipality, each being fined $20.00 and costs.

Turned Turtle

One of our leading merchants was almost deprived of the services of his expert window dresser through his inability to direct the movements of a Ford car. While under his management and while in a state of extreme nervousness the car suddenly swerved from the road, turned turtle over a stone fence and hurled its occupants into an adjoining field, thus averting a double calamity.

High School Board

At a meeting of the High School Board on Tuesday night Miss Turner was re-engaged at a salary of $1,000. Miss Macleod, whose salary is raised automatically, up to a certain standard, has not decided as to whether she will remain for another year. Mr. Moffatt received an increase of $100.00. The resignation of Miss Thompson was received, and the Board expressed deep regret at losing her services and appointed the chairman and secretary to prepare a suitable testimonial.

A New Broom Device

Mr. Jos. Anson has recently called at this office to show us his latest invention in the way of brooms. He has patented a scheme whereby a broom of the ordinary broom-corn make can be adjusted to a handle and reversed at will. The idea seems to us both novel and expedient, and will enable a handle to be used for a length of time and when necessary a new broom inserted as well as to be used for a mop or scrub brush. The cost is low and the new brooms will likely be largely used. We congratulate Mr. Anson on his invention. A company for the manufacture of these brooms is shortly to be incorporated, and a factory may be started in Madoc if sufficient support is forthcoming.

Laid at Rest

In the death of Mr. George Kerr, aged 70 years, on Monday last, Madoc loses one of its oldest and most respected citizens.

Mr. Kerr suffered from a paralytic stroke, which he received last fall, and which kept him confined to the house all winter. Notwithstanding the impossibility of ever being able to resume his labor, Mr. Kerr was always hopeful that he would, at least, be able to attend to the spring gardening. About four weeks ago he received a second stroke which confined him to bed and since then he gradually sank and passed peacefully away on Monday evening last. The cheerfulness and fortitude with which he bore his suffering showed that he was ready and willing to accept the relief that was soon to be his and say with complete confidence "Thy will be done."

He leaves to mourn the loss of a fond husband and affectionate father, a wife and seven children: Margaret, of home; Mrs. B. M. Sargent, of Penetanguishene; Mrs. H. Campion, of Marmora; Charles, of Tweed; Walter and John, of Penetanguishene; and Alexander, of Midland.

The funeral took place on Wednesday from the family residence to the Methodist church, where the Rev. Mounter delivered a most impressive sermon, and thence to Lakeview cemetery for interment.

The heartfelt sympathy of the community is extended to the family in their time of bereavement.

MOORE'S NON-LEAKABLE

Moore's Non-Leakable has many advantages over the ordinary fountain pen. You can carry it anywhere and in any position, with the absolute assurance that it will not leak. When the pen point is pulled down into the barrel and the cap, properly adjusted, the ink becomes incased in an airtight and ink-tight chamber, thus making leakage utterly impossible. By this simple operation the pen point rests in ink, and is all ready for instant use without requiring the preliminary shaking so common with fountain pens.

Moore's is the easiest of pens to fill. Simply unscrew the cap and it is ready to fill. No points to unscrew or points to take off. Scribes and scribes to suit all names and prices. $2.50, $3.50 and up. INSIST ON MOORE'S. MOORE'S NON-LEAKABLE, MIDGET—2 1/4" long. Just the pen for Doctors. Painful Effects of Chronic Rheumatism Quickly Routed by Rheuma

If your nerves are all crippled from attacks of rheumatism, neuritis can easily get a strong hold on the nerves. This most painful disease is one of the hardest known to expel, but Rheuma can reach it if given a chance. This testimony is positive proof:

"Last March I was so crippled with neuritis in left limb I could walk scarcely at all. Tried all remedies I heard of and had two physicians. Nothing did me any good until I used Rheuma—$2.00 worth of your medicines surely cured me.—Mrs. C. E. Hayes, Russell, Ky."

Dainty Dishes.

Cream Puffs.—The choux pastry, perfectly smooth and glossy, may be taken up in a tablespoon and put on a buttered baking tin, running the spoon around in a circle to a point to make a finished top. But those who make these in quantity use a pastry bag and a large tube through which they press the paste so that the puffs will all be of one size.

The baking in a moderate oven is a difficult thing. The oven must be hot enough to swell the pastry, but if it is too hot the paste dries and does not swell, and a little too much heat at the last makes an almost uneatable puff because so dry. Twenty to twenty-five minutes is sufficient for the cooking. Insufficiently cooked, the large puffs will fall and are indigestible. They may also fall because the paste is not quite stiff enough. When cold cut open and fill with either whipped cream or a cooked cream. The tops are usually brushed over with a beaten egg, thinned with milk, before they are put in the oven, but sugar and nuts, etc., may be used. If these puffs are made quite small they are good hot with a sweet sauce.

Choux Paste.—Put one cup of water, one-fourth pound of unsalted butter, four tablespoons of sugar, and a pinch of salt into a saucepan, set on stove and bring to boil. Have ready three-fourths of a cup of dried and sifted flour and when the mixture boils dredge the flour into it, stirring rapidly with a wooden spoon, and then cook over a gentle fire until the butter begins to ooze from the dough, which will not then stick to the spoon. For the inexperienced the putting in the flour may be difficult, and the pan would best be drawn from the fire until it is in. On no account should the fire be hot enough so that the paste will stick to the pan before it reaches the proper consistency.

When the butter begins to ooze out, take from fire and add immediately to it one by one, three or four eggs without beating. Stir each one in carefully and thoroughly before adding the next, that is, the paste should be thoroughly bound together and smooth between each process. A teaspoonful or even a little more of orange flower water or grated lemon peel may be used for flavoring. Put in with the first egg, although vanilla may be used. The orange flower water is incomparably the daintiest and can be procured at the drug store.

The freshest eggs should be used in making this paste and put in one by one, for the reason that the paste must not be moistened too quickly or it will not bind. Milk instead of water can be used and one-fourth less butter is then required. Salted butter can be used, but no additional salt must then be added and the results are not as dainty with it. It is hard for the amateur to get in enough flour, and as different flours behave differently this problem cannot be discussed in a word.

Profiteroles.—Out of the unsweetened choux pastry are made these tiny balls for soup, which are so much more delicious freshly made than when from the great bottle of the pastry shop. The paste is pressed out of a tiny tube on a baking tin, and may or may not be brushed over with beaten egg before baked.

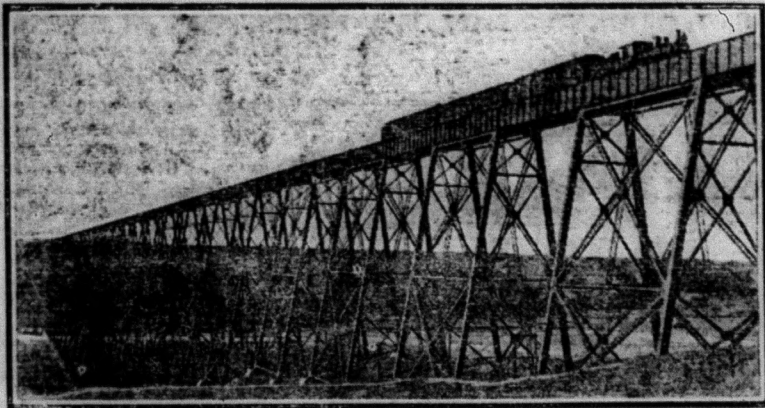

Cake St. Honore.—There are six or seven processes to the making of this cream cake. A foundation of pie crust in the shape of a round plaque is made. The prettiest cakes are between six and seven inches in diameter. Around the edge of this are pressed from a pastry bag, with a point the size of the end of the little finger, sixteen or seventeen little balls, or choux of paste, or with a teaspoon good little balls may be made and baked separately from the crust and then added to it, any little brown points being nipped off after the baking.

When the little choux are cold they are dipped in a syrup made by cooking together till it is rather stiff from one-fourth to half a cup of sugar and an equal measure of water with a few drops of lemon juice to keep it from granulating. The economical will find one-fourth cup of sugar sufficient. The inexperienced will need more. After these are dipped in the syrup they are placed in a circle, close together around the edge of the foundation. The whole is then filled at the last minute with whipped cream, put on in fancy globes, in the summer, or in the winter a cooked cream is used. The whipped cream should be prepared at least an hour before it is used.

A French cook giving an elaborate lesson of many pages and many illustrations on this cake says that one can quickly succeed in making it well, but that the amateur must not expect without many repetitions of the work to make cakes like the pastry maker who makes cakes all day long.

Whipped Cream.—Cream to be whipped ought to remain at least an hour on the ice, and the work

GREATEST BRIDGE IN WORLD IS ON C.P.R. NEAR LETHBRIDGE

It is a Mile Long and Cost $2,000,000 to Construct.

One of the most gigantic engineering works in Canada is the large viaduct carrying steel across the Belly River just west of the city of Lethbridge on the Crow's Nest branch of the Canadian Pacific Railway in Alberta. The bridge is over a mile in length and has a maximum height of 314 feet above the bed of the river. It is the longest and highest bridge in the world. There are longer bridges and higher bridges, but combining both dimensions, no bridge in the world measures up to it. Before it was built the railway line crossed the St. Mary's River, using twenty small wooden bridges. When a new survey was made a crossing was found below the confluence of the St. Mary's and Belly rivers, and this large viaduct constructed at a cost of two million dollars. It required 645 cars of steel in the construction, and altogether over 1,000 cars of material may be sure to succeed if the bowl is set in a dish of broken ice. It is necessary to stop on time or the cream becomes butter. It is best to begin with a little in a bowl and use a whisk. When this is frothy turn it through a sieve, and go on whipping what runs through. You will not then lose your whole supply if some should turn to butter. If the large glass whipping churns are used they should be cold. Sweetened whipped cream is called chantilly in cosmopolitan cookery.

Household Hints.

If potatoes are rubbed with olive oil before baking, the skins will be thin and soft and will not cling to the inside of the potato.

Rub a little butter under the edge of the spout of the cream pitcher; it will prevent a drop of cream from running down over the pitcher.

Before washing lace curtains, baste a narrow strip of muslin along the outer edge, allowing it to remain until the washing and drying process is complete.

White discolorations on furniture are successfully removed by rubbing them lightly with a soft cloth moistened with essence of peppermint. Small boards on which to set saucepans, kettles, frying pans, etc., can easily be made, and they are a great saving to the kitchen table.

Remove ink and fruit stains from the floor by washing the stained part with cold water, then covering it with baking soda. When dry wash off the soda.

Flourish when put away for some time should be rubbed on the bottom when slightly warm with a mixture of vaseline and sweet oil.

If a small amount of moist cotton is wrapped around the stems of flowers before the tinfoil is put on, the flowers can be worn much longer.

A mixture of one quart of rain water, two ounces of ammonia, one teaspoonful of saltpetre and one ounce of shaving soap cut up fine will remove grease from the finest fabrics.

When a roast is small it is best to start it on top of the stove. Heat the pan very hot, put the roast in and turn it frequently. The quick searing holds the juices.

When straining soup it is a good idea to get a coarse strainer inside the finer one. In this way the fine strainer will not become clogged with pieces of meat and broken bones.

Remember that cooking utensils should be near the stove, and strainers, sieves, spoons and ladles should be hung so near the stove that you can reach them as you stand by the stove.

It is best to make the desserts in the morning. Not only are they out of the way, but the dishes and bowls can be washed at the same time the breakfast dishes are being done.

When vegetables are cooked with the cover off the dish, they retain their color in much of their original freshness.

When a sponge becomes slimy, soak it in strong borax water, wring out and renew the water. Continue this until the sponge becomes clean.

A little bit of a pine tree 10 or 12 inches high, brought from the woods and planted in a small pot will make a delightful bit of green for the centre of the dining table.

In washing muslin curtains they will look more sheer if you boil two quarts of wheat bran in six quarts of water for a half an hour and strain and mix in the water in which the curtains are to be washed.

Occasionally a man wins a fight because he hasn't the nerve to run away.

was used. A watchman is on constant guard to prevent accident. After each train passes over the bridge this officer takes his mile walk to the other end, and waits for the next train, when he returns on his beat. There has not been an accident on the viaduct since it was turned over to the operating department of the railway company. The Spokane Flyer, a fast train running between St. Paul and Spokane, uses this bridge.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, MAY 3.

Lesson V. The Prodigal Son (Temperance Lesson)—Luke 15. 11-32. Golden Text, Luke 15.18.

Verse 11. And he said—This introduction separates the parable from the two preceding, and we cannot be sure it was spoken on the same occasion. However that may be, the connection in thought must be recognized by all those who read these parables, and it could not have a more fitting position than the one in which Luke has placed it.

12. The younger . . . said, Give me the portion of thy substance that falleth to me—The portion of the younger would be half of what the elder received, that is, one-third of the estate, if the father had but two sons (Deut. 21. 17). The younger son's demand for his portion during the lifetime of his father was unusual, but such cases were not unheard of in the East.

And he divided unto them his living—The father gives the elder son his portion also, but he remains at home.

13. Not many days after, the younger son gathered his possessions together. He had already made his plans; now he carried them out. Selling the land and turning everything into money, he takes his leave, apparently not to return.

Wasted his substance with riotous living—The youth knew nothing of the labor and self-denial with which the property had been acquired, and being away from the restraints of home and of those who knew him, he squandered the money as thoughtlessly as he had acquired it.

14. Began to be in want—His associates in his "riotous living" were not the kind of friends who would stand by him when his money was gone and he needed assistance.

15. Went and joined himself to one of the citizens of that country—From the luxurious quarters in which he had doubtless lived and entertained, he is thrust out to earn his food as best he may. Having no one to aid or recommend him, he must attach himself like a bond servant to a foreigner, who sent him to feed swine—to a Jew a most odious task and an abomination, since swine were peculiarly unclean, both actually and according to Jewish ritualistic classification.

16. Husks that the swine did eat—The pods of the carob tree, still found in Palestine and other Mediterranean countries.

No man gave unto him—These people had no interest in a half-starved foreigner who could not earn enough to eat. Would the sons of many rich men to-day be as incapable of supporting themselves if their money should be lost?

17. When he came to himself—His dissipation had shut out the thoughts of home. The loss of his money and his social degradation had made him lethargic. Now that he faces starvation, he arouses himself, and the thoughts of home bring a longing to return.

Hired servants—Laborers who had no steady work, but were hired during a busy season. They were regarded much as tramps are regarded in our country, their position being inferior to that of household slaves.

18. Against heaven—That is,

LONG PROMISED MESSIAH

Jesus' Humility in the Hour of Success and Courage in the Moment of Failure

"And many spread their garments upon the way; and others branches. . . . And they that went before, and they that followed, cried, Hosanna, blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord. . . . Hosanna in the highest."—Mark xi., 8-10.

It was a wonderful reception which Jesus received upon this final occasion of His entry into Jerusalem. It marked without any question the flood tide of His popularity and fame. Here were people gathered from all the four quarters of Palestine, and some of them undoubtedly from foreign lands, to celebrate the great feast of the Passover. And here they were all rushing out, clad in holiday garments to bid welcome to Him who was now hailed for the first time perhaps as the long promised Messiah, and crowds of them accompany Him before and behind, as he made His way into the city, with dancing and singing and ringing shouts of Hosanna! Hosanna in the Highest.

Inspiring, indeed, was this popular triumph in the Holy City. And yet, if we can judge from the meagre reports which have been left us of this great day, Jesus does not seem to have been at all elated by His reception. On the contrary, Luke tells us specifically that as "He drew nigh" he looked across to the valley to the city, gleaming white as alabaster in the blazing sun, "and wept over it." In the very midst of all this enthusiasm over his coming, in other words, Jesus remained indifferent to the applause which was showered upon Him, unaffected by the proclamation upon a thousand lips of His Messiahship, and thought only of the great work which He had still to do, the far goal which He had still to seek, and the probability of the disaster which these involved. He was as little affected by the shouts of "Hosanna" which greeted Him on this Sunday as He was by the very different shouts of "Crucify Him! Crucify Him!" which fell upon His ears on the following Friday. In the one case—as in the other He went His way with His heart fixed on that great end which gave Him humility in the hour of success and courage in the moment of failure. He was lifted up above the equal perils of popular hatred by the steadfast purpose which bound His soul to God.

In this spiritual aloofness, or rather freedom, from the passing accidents of earthly fortune do we find the secret at once of inward peace and outward consecration. And in this steadfast fixity of mind and heart upon God's purposes, as contrasted with men's desires, do we find the condition of this freedom. To keep steadfastly upon the way of service, unspoiled by flattery and undaunted by hostility, to do the work of God with a soul untempted by applause—this is "the imitation of Christ."—Rev. John Haynes Holmes.

against God. The prodigal knew that misconduct toward parents was a sin utterly displeasing to God.

19. Make me as one of thine hired servants—His penitence is real. He asks this as a favor. It is so much better than his present position.

20. He arose—He acts upon his resolution at once. He makes his confession and offers no excuse. While he was yet afar off, his father saw him—Was able to recognize his son even though clothed in filthy rags.

Was moved with compassion and ran and fell on his neck, and kissed him—The father's welcome is given before the son has spoken a word. The father does not know in what spirit he has come; it is enough that he has returned.

21. The son makes his confession as he had planned, but the father's forgiveness is so complete and his generosity so great that the son cannot meet it with a proposal to be made a hired servant.

22. The father said to his servants He speaks no word of reproach to the prodigal. Doubtless he recognizes the fact that the son has seen his own folly and learned his lesson.

Bring forth quickly the best robe—A long stately robe worn on ceremonial occasions.

Put a ring on his hand—Perhaps a signet ring, which gave the wearer some authority in the house.

Shoes on his feet—Sandals, as were worn by free men. Slaves went barefoot.

23. Bring the fatted calf—Doubtless one being reserved for an approaching feast. But to the father this occasion is of far greater importance than the feast.

The remainder of the parable should not be overlooked either in private study or in class discussion. The attitude of the elder son toward the returning prodigal is in sharp contrast with the generous forgiveness of the father.

ARE PRAIRIES PERMANENT?

Signs of Their Disappearance in the West.

The dictionary defines a prairie as "a level or rolling tract of treeless land covered with coarse grass." Strictly speaking, then, the prairies no longer exist in Canada except locally, for there are no longer any large areas exempt from settlement and the settlers throughout the West have already been supplied by the Dominion Forestry Branch with over 24,000,000 trees, all of which have been planted and most of which are growing up in the form of woodlots and shelter-belts. So successful have been these plantations and so great has the demand for trees grown, that the Indian Head Nursery Station, which has an annual capacity of approximately three million trees, can no longer supply this demand, and it has been necessary to establish a branch nursery at Saskatoon.

The opinion was once wide-spread that the prairies were naturally treeless, and many ingenious theories were advanced to account for this treelessness. One was that the soil was too fine; a second that the soil was all right, but that because of the thick sod the tree seeds could not reach it; another theory was that there was insufficient rainfall, and still another that the dry winter winds killed the buds and twigs. But if any of these factors have been detrimental to tree-growth on the prairies in the past, the Forestry Branch has since succeeded in producing trees which are so adapted to climatic conditions that growth is assured if the trees are given a proper start.

The most probable cause of the treelessness of the prairies is man, not Nature. The fact that the Indians long ago were in the habit of setting fire to the forests and grasslands in order to afford better grazing, and that in the fall when these fires were usually set, the prevailing winds were westerly, seems to prove that from the arid plains of southern Alberta and the United States, the area of treeless land was gradually extended by fire, hundreds of miles easterly. But in Manitoba, since these fires have ceased, the western fringe of forest has begun to recover lost ground, and, aided by artificial reforestation under the stimulus of the Forestry Branch, tree-growth will soon be as common on the prairies as on the farms of Eastern Canada.

Hospitals of Olden Time.

Hospital patients of to-day are better off than their ancestors of "the good old times." Mr. Wheatley in his book on "London," quotes from a Scottish act of parliament of 1386 to the effect that "if any man brings to the market corrupt swine or salmon to be sold, they shall be taken by the baillie, and incontinent, without any question, shall be sent to the leper folk"; and if there be no lepers then only "shall they be destroyed utterly." The same pleasant custom obtained in Oxford in the fifteenth century, where all putrid meat and fish were by statute sent to St. John's hospital.

HEALTH

Operations in the Home.

It is sometimes necessary to perform a serious operation in the home of the patient. All surgeons prefer to operate in hospitals, when they can, because there they find everything in scientific readiness before, during, and after the operation. But many a country doctor performs difficult and dangerous operations at a minute's notice, and under the most difficult and discouraging conditions as to appliances and help. He must often use a smoking kitchen lamp because there is no other, forego almost all attempts at surgical cleanliness because there are none of the requisites at hand, and make use of the clumsy and terrified people round him because there is no other help. Yet he often saves his patient.

Therefore, when an immediate and serious operation must be undertaken in a cleanly private home, no one need be panic-stricken. When no nurse can be had, the surgeon will say what he needs. Most of all he needs a quiet, self-controlled assistant who has plenty of coolness and common sense. If there is any choice in the matter, it is a good plan not to operate in the room where the patient is to be kept, but in an adjoining one. It is better that a surgical patient shall not see all the preparations for an operation, and he should not be carried far after it is over.

Light is a very important consideration; the surgeon must have all he can get. If the kitchen table has to be turned into an operating table, put it near the best light to be had.

Cleanliness is the great thing for the assistant to keep in mind,—not ordinary domestic cleanliness, but a very different thing,—surgical cleanliness. Be sure that there is a constant supply of boiling water for sterilizing instruments. If water cannot be boiled in the operating room, you can set an alcohol lamp in the bath tub, and put the sterilizing pan on it. Basins, nail brushes, and linen should be boiled, and it is well to iron all the linen that is to be used with a very hot iron, just short of scorching. Fasten sheets to the wall all round the table with glass push pins, and clear the room of furniture, rugs, ornaments, and pictures, as far as possible.—Youth's Companion.

Kissing and Influenza.

If you are of a warm and affectionate nature, if you have the inveterate habit of breaking into osculatory expression of your joy and enthusiasm, you must make an heroic effort to conquer that practice during these days of uncertain weather—one day cold and the next as mild as milk.

If you don't exercise the most rigid self-control in the matter of "this abominable habit of indiscriminate kissing," you will either infect with or be infected by the horrid little germ of cold in the head. An eminent London doctor says so, and this doctor knows.

"Kissing," says the doctor, "is one of the most frequent causes of infection in cases of cold in the head."

"Women with a bad cold think nothing of kissing their own or anybody else's children. They think nothing of the chances of infecting the child with their own ailment, although they know that there is nothing more nagging and disagreeable than a cold in the head, which lowers the system and makes a person susceptible to other more serious troubles."

It is the same with influenza, this doctor affirms. A woman who is suffering with influenza will ask her friend to come in and cheer her up, in spite of the fact that influenza is one of the most highly infectious diseases known.

Apologies of influenza, it is quite true that nobody likes it. It has not a friend in the world and every country tries to make out that it is a native of some other country.

In Russia it is called Siberian fever, and in Siberia Chinese fever. In France it has been called Spanish catarrh, and Spain returns the compliment by calling it Russian fever.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

The best thing to do is to do your best.

With more justice comes less desire to talk about it.

Good people are supposed to be happy, but their looks often belie it.

It's hard to keep up appearances and save money at the same time.

There are times when the truth is about as inspiring as a cold fried egg.

More people might acquire wisdom if they were not preoccupied with foolishness.

When a man starts out to paint the town the police are pretty sure to catch him red-handed.

It takes a woman to conceal the things she doesn't know, but a man's ignorance is always cropping out.

SPRING IMPURITIES IN THE BLOOD

A Tonic/Medicine is a Necessity at This Season.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are an all year round tonic, blood-builder and nerve-restorer. But they are especially valuable in the spring when the system is loaded with impurities as a result of the indoor life of the winter months. There is no other season when the blood is so much in need of purifying and enriching, and every dose of these pills helps to make new, rich, red blood. In the spring one feels weak and tired—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills give strength. In the spring the appetite is often poor—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills develop the appetite, tone the stomach and aid weak digestion. It is in the spring that poisons in the blood find an outlet in disfiguring pimples, eruptions and boils—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills speedily clear the blood because they go to the root of the trouble in the blood. In the spring anaemia, rheumatism, indigestion, neuralgia, erysipelas and many other troubles are most persistent because of poor, weak blood, and it is at this time when all nature takes on new life that the blood must seriously need attention. Some people do these themselves with purgatives at this season, but these only further weaken themselves. A purgative merely gallops through the system, emptying the bowels, but it does not cure anything. On the other hand Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood which reaches every nerve and organ in the body, bringing new strength, new health and vigor to weak, easily tired men, women and children. Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills this spring—they will not disappoint you.

BULLET IN THE HEART.

Man Who Tried to End Life Saved by Curious Operation.

A bullet in the heart is no longer a necessarily mortal lesion. This has been proved by Dr. Finisterer, who presented the other day to the Vienna Medical Society the case of a man who attempted suicide and who was found shot in the street. Brought to the nearest police station, the man was from all appearances in a hopeless condition, the pulse having all but stopped.

Dr. Finisterer first injected camphor and then placed the patient under the Roentgen rays to ascertain the exact location of the wound. It was found that the bullet had lodged in the right ventricle and moved about freely with each expansion and contraction of the major organ. After satisfying himself that the extraction of the bullet would mean almost certain death to the patient Dr. Finisterer sewed up the heart externally, with the result that after a fortnight the operation was pronounced a complete success.

Four weeks later the bullet had become firmly fixed in the tissues of the lower part of the ventricles, where it is causing no discomfort worth mentioning to the patient, who will carry the memento for the rest of his life.

THE FIELD OF WATERLOO.

Bill Passed to Prevent Any Further Desecration.

As has been already announced, the Belgian Government have decided to preserve the field of Waterloo from any further desecration, and have passed a bill to that effect. It was especially intended, says a Brussels correspondent, to satisfy British sentiment, which demanded that the features of the famous fighting grounds should undergo no fresh alterations. The House agreed to the bill, and passed it without discussion five minutes after introduction, whereupon it was sent up to the Senate, which ratified it as promptly. It is probable that no proposal has ever become law so quickly. The bill prohibits large plantations of trees, the construction of houses or farm, or the working of quarries and diggings of any kind on the battlefield. It empowers the Government to buy up any plot of ground at Waterloo it may choose, and to prevent the landlords there exercising ordinary proprietary rights, the deprivation of such rights to be reasonably compensated by the Belgian Treasury.

Dogs Distribute Disease.

Two of the most learned French professors of the Pasteur Institute have issued the following warning: "Beware of your pet dog." Street dogs of Marseilles have been found suffering from the dreadful Indian "black pest." In India this disease usually attacks dogs, and as many as ninety-eight per cent. die from its ravages. The southern ports of Italy and Algeria know the disease under the name of the "Mediterranean pest." This disease does not confine itself to the dogs themselves, but is carried by parasites to human beings, and, singularly enough, nearly always attacks children from the ages of six months to three years. The child becomes feverish and nervous, goes into a decline, and gradually wastes away. Out of three hundred cases under special study only two per cent. have recovered. At the present time Great Britain is immune from any danger in this direction, and sufficiently protected against any such likelihood by the complete prohibition of the importation of dogs.

CHILDHOOD CONSTIPATION

Constipation is one of the most common ailments of childhood, and no child suffering from it thrives well. To banish it no other medicine acts so promptly and surely as Baby's Own Tablets. They never fail to bring relief. Concerning them Mrs. Dominique Ferland, St. Michel, Que., writes: "I consider Baby's Own Tablets a marvellous remedy for little ones. I gave them to my baby for constipation and they soon made him well again." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE PROPER DINNER TIME.

French Savant Says 7.30 O'Clock A.M. Is Right Time.

The Lancet, the famous medical periodical, upsets London by declaring through the mouth of its Paris correspondent that learned scientists have proved that the proper time for dinner is half-past seven o'clock in the morning.

It seems that Professor Darsonval communicated to the Academie des Sciences recently the results of M. Bergonie's studies on the subject, which, he said, proved that "the least suitable hours for meals are between noon and 1 o'clock and between 7 and 8 in the evening." These are precisely the hours that Europe has set apart for meals.

According to M. Bergonie, the meal hours in a system of rational hygiene would be as follows: The principal meal of the day at 7.30 a.m., or as soon after that time as possible, so as to obtain all the necessary energy for the day's work and restore the abstinence; a second meal of 300 to 400 calories, consisting of milk, sugar, and cakes, at 4.30; a light repast of 700 to 800 calories at 8.30 or 9 p.m.

M. Bergonie gives details showing the excellent results of the regimen in a family which followed it for six years.

Convict Makes $5,000 a Year.

Pere la Capinette murdered a man in a jealous passion a quarter of a century ago in Paris and was sent to New Caledonia. A commission was recently sent out to inspect the convict prison and inquire into the Government lands that are allotted to convicts who are released for good conduct. They found Pere la Capinette, white-haired, benevolent, and venerable, with his seventy years, surrounded by his sons, whom he had brought from France. He showed the commissioners over the coffee plantation on which he had settled after his release. "I am making $5,000 a year now," he explained, and then he added, with a sigh, "if only I had committed my murder twenty years earlier I should have been a millionaire by now."

She Has The Very Best of Reasons

Why This Manitoba Lady Recommends Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. Bourbonniere had many troubles, all of which were caused by Sick Kidneys, and She Found a Simple and Complete Cure.

St. Rose du Lac, Man., Apr. 20th (Special).—Mrs. D. J. Bourbonniere, an estimable lady of this place, is losing no opportunity to praise Dodd's Kidney Pills to her friends. And she has a reason. Here it is in her own words.

"I suffered very much from my kidneys," Mrs. Bourbonniere says. "I was tired and nervous and my memory was failing. I had heart flutterings, my back was sore and I was troubled with headaches. Rheumatism was finally added to my sufferings and I was in a bad way indeed."

"I tried one medicine, but it did me no good, and then I was advised to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I am very glad that I did, for now after taking four boxes I am a well woman again."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cured Mrs. Bourbonniere because all her troubles came from sick kidneys. Sick kidneys cannot do their work of straining the impurities out of the blood, and the result is sickness, depression and lassitude all over the body. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured the kidneys: the purified blood did the rest.

DRESSED THEM IN RUGS.

Children Neglected by Parents Had No Clothing.

Evidence of persistent cruelty to children extending over two months was given at St. Helens, in London, England, recently against John Francis Morgan, of Jersey Street, and his wife, Louisa, who were sentenced to six months' imprisonment. It was alleged that four of the five children of prisoners had been cruelly treated, and that two boys had not been out of a bedroom for two months. They had not attended school, and their existence was not known to the school authorities. For the prosecution it was stated that at mid-day Inspector Cooper, of the N.S.P.C.C., and Sgt. Bates were investigating another case when they discovered the Morgan family occupying one bedroom. The officers, on entering, found four children, aged respectively eight, seven and five years, and two years and eleven months, huddled together on a dirty bed, practically without clothing.

The children were pale and ill-nourished. The little girl was unable to open her eyes from severe and neglected inflammation, and the boys were extremely timid and nervous. The elder lad said that he had not been bathed for a year, and the parents admitted that the two older boys had not been out of the bedroom for more than two months. There was not a scrap of clothing. It was stated, and the children had to be removed to the workhouse in horse rugs. The parents said that the children had not been able to go out of the house because they had no clothes. Dr. Green, the workhouse medical officer, said that such treatment was likely to make the children timid and even demented.

Liquid Cough Mixtures Can't Cure Bronchitis

But the Healing Fumes of Catarrh-ozone, Which are Breathed to the Furthest Recesses of the Bronchial Tubes, Bring Quick Relief and Sure Cure.

Every sufferer from coughs, colds, bronchitis and all throat and chest ailments needs a soothing, healing medicine which goes direct to the breathing organs in the chest and lungs, attacks the trouble at the source, disperses the germs of disease, and cures the ailment thoroughly. And this medicine is "Catarrh-ozone."

The germ-killing balsamic vapor mixes with the breath, descends through the throat, down the bronchial tubes, and finally reaches the deepest air cells in the lungs. All parts are soothed with rich, pure, medicinal essences, whereas with a remedy the affected parts could not be reached, and harm would result through benumbing the stomach with drugs.

"I have been a chronic sufferer from Catarrh in the nose and throat for over eight years. I think I have spent four hundred dollars trying to get relief. I have spent but six dollars on Catarrh-ozone, and have been completely cured, and, in fact, have been well for some time. Catarrh-ozone is the only medicine I have been able to find that would not only give temporary relief, but will always cure permanently. Yours sincerely (Signed), WILLIAM RAGAN, Brockville, Ont."

For absolute, permanent cure use Catarrh-ozone. Two months' outfit costs $1.00; smaller size, 50c., at all dealers, or the Catarrh-ozone Company, Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

RINGWORM ABOUT CHILD'S HEAD

In Several Places. Blister Raised Up, Swollen and Scaly. Hair Fell Out. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured in Four Weeks.

Lorne, Que.—"My little son, aged nine years, was afflicted with ringworm in several places about his head. The ringworm began with a few pimples and as it grew worse it was one dark colored blister raised up and swelled. It was kind of scaly. The worst place was behind his right ear. It was about the size of a silver dollar, dark and swelled, the worst kind I ever saw. It itched so much he could not rest. It looked very badly. His hair fell out gradually."

"Finally I sent for a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used to take real hot water and the Cuticura Soap and used to clean it off. Then I would put the Cuticura Ointment on the affected part. There was pus in the sores and the Cuticura Ointment drew that out and healed at the same time. We saw the Cuticura Soap and Ointment were very good so I got some more and it was four weeks from the time I started using the Cuticura Soap and Ointment till he was completely cured." (Signed) Mrs. Thos. Bagley, May 20, 1913.

MILLIONS LOST IN STRIKES.

What the Workmen of Great Britain Have Lost.

Eighty-seven million dollars in wages have been lost by the workmen of the United Kingdom in the past ten years on account of stoppage due to industrial disputes of all kinds, according to statistics prepared from the Government Board of Trade returns, supplemented by details furnished by union leaders in the principal trades.

Against this figure is placed a net gain in wages as the result of such disputes of $13,000,000. Also, it is estimated that the laboring classes as a whole have secured advances in wages in the same period aggregating $75,000,000, but the greater proportion of these have been obtained through the medium of working agreements and conciliation boards.

Fifty per cent. of the strikes of the past ten years have been won by the employers, 25 per cent. by the workers, and the other 25 per cent. were compromised.

This Board Unique.

The local government board of the British Cabinet, where Herbert Samuel, postmaster general, is to succeed John Burns as president, dates only from 1871, when it was created to take over the supervision of sanitary laws, local government, and the poor law, previously administered by privy council, the home office, and the poor law board. The board consists of exalted functionaries and secretaries of state, but never meets, and all the business is transacted by the president and his parliamentary secretary.

Fort Hood Island. AMOS T. SMITH.

Told to Keep Away.

After nearly a week's absence James presented himself at his fiancée's home. "Oh," she murmured icily, from her seat at the piano, "you!" "Yes, only me," meekly answered James. "Wonder you troubled to come," she remarked in an interlude of her playing, disdainfully ignoring the five-pound box of chocolates that had been placed on the piano top. "I couldn't," the doctor wouldn't let me, dear." "Doctor wouldn't let you," she repeated, scornfully. "And don't dear me, please." "Be reasonable, sweetheart," he implored. "I had dyspepsia so badly that the doctor strictly forbade my seeing you." "Poor thing!" she answered loftily. "And why was I not to be seen, pray?" "He told me to keep away from all sweet things, darling," he echoed.

ROYAL CIRCLES LACK GIRLS.

Rulers of Europe Alarmed at Daughters' Emancipation.

The birth of a son to the Duchess of Brunswick, the only daughter of the German Emperor, recalls the fact that in one phase of society there are actually too few girls. This cheerful and quite unusual state of things is in the ranks of the princesses of Europe.

There is an equal surplus of eligible princes, who are unable to find wives—so they say. Be this as it may it is a fact that both the young men and women of royal circles show a distinct disinclination toward matrimony to order. Princess Patricia (Pat), it is well known, is the despair of many suitors.

It is said that much alarm is felt among royal parents at their daughters' emancipation. Among the "too few" princesses on the Continent the elder daughters of the Czar, notably the Grand Duchess Tatiana, the beauty of the family, and Princess Elizabeth of Rumania, are considered the most interesting. The latter is a really beautiful girl. Any debutante might envy her perfect features, her cloud of lovely hair and the deep, expressive eyes, holding something of a tragic intensity.

Both she and her younger sister, Princess Marie, have inherited the wonderful Coburg elegance, and have, besides, something of the half gay, half sad, charm of their native land. The citizens of Bucharest are justly proud of their Princesses.

Death Nearly Claimed New Brunswick Lady

Was Restored to Her Anxious Family When Hope Had Gone.

St. John, N.B., Dec. 15th.—At one time it was feared that Mrs. J. Grant, of 3 White St., would succumb to the deadly ravages of advanced kidney trouble. "My first attacks of back-ache and kidney trouble began years ago. For six years that dull gnawing pain has been present. When I exerted myself it was terribly intensified. If I caught cold the pain was unendurable. I used most everything, but nothing gave that certain grateful relief that came from Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. Instead of being bowed down with pain, to-day I am strong, enjoy splendid appetite, sleep soundly. Lost properties have been instilled into my blood—cheeks are rosy with color, and I thank that day that I heard of so grand a medicine as Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

Every woman should use these pills regularly because good health pays, and it's good, vigorous health that comes to all who use Dr. Hamilton's Mandrake and Butternut Pills.

Both Cover Mistakes.

A pompous physician who was inclined to criticize others was watching a stonemason build a fence for his neighbor. "Jim," he said, "mortar covers up a good many mistakes, doesn't it?" "Yes, doctor," calmly replied the man, "and so does the spade."

"Doctor, I want to thank you for your valuable medicine." "It helped you, did it?" said the doctor. "It helped me wonderfully." "How many bottles did you find it necessary to take?" "Oh, I didn't take any of it. My uncle took one bottle, and I am his sole heir."
